From the Editors

AS THE GREAT and the good of British television descend on London's Royal Festival Hall for the Television Baftas, it's tempting to think of the awards show as a star-studded exercise in self-congratulation. Which, in some ways, it is. But television has a lot to feel good about right now.

In the last few days TV has brought Britain together for the coronation. This week there's another example of a live show that has the power to unite viewers, not just across the nation, but across frontiers, too.

It's easy to dismiss Eurovision as a schlocky exercise in Euro-pop, but the reality is that last year's contest, in which Britain's Sam Ryder came second, not only attracted 10.1 million viewers in the UK but brought together 161 million people across Europe. The fact that Ukraine's entry won would have come as no surprise to seasoned Eurovision fans. But it was also testament to the power of culture to give people a voice.

Ukraine triumphed not because it had the best song but because Europe wanted to show solidarity with a country caught up in Putin's war. Needless to say Russia had no entry – and nor does it this year. Due to the ongoing conflict, Ukraine's right to host Eurovision has passed to Britain, which is why the final is being held in Liverpool. Turn to page 24 to find our guide to the evening and what it takes to win.

Who knows who will top the leader board, but as Graham Norton tells us, everyone involved will be flying the flag for Ukraine. Whether that's a comfort to Ukrainians is hard to say. But don't underestimate the impact of television. As the Paralympian and Strictly star Ellie Simmonds tells us on page 19, "If I hadn't watched the Athens Olympics, I wouldn't have gone to Beijing four years later. TV is powerful." We think she's right.

TEN QUESTIONS WITH

MICHELLE KEEGAN

The Corrie barmaid on leaving her soap past behind – and arriving in Australia as a Ten Pound Pom

Since leaving Coronation Street in 2014 after seven years, Stockport-born actor Michelle Keegan has been in demand. Following Army drama Our Girl and award-winning Sky comedy Brassic, the 35-year-old is now dipping her toe into period drama, playing nurse Kate in Ten Pound Poms, a six-part BBC1 series about postwar Brits who were lured to Australia with the promise of a wonderful new life...

Why did you say yes to Ten Pound Poms?

Apart from the fact it was filmed in Australia? It's a great part but I also enjoyed learning about the history. This was the 1950s when it was very grim living in England. People were promised a sunny new life with great job opportunities for just £10, but it wasn't as idyllic as they thought it would be: they were put up in migrant hostels and had their passports taken off them for two years. My character, Kate, is out there alone, rewriting her past. She has a secret and she's there for a reason.

How did you enjoy filming in Australia?

It was a lot colder than I thought! All I packed were flip-flops, dresses and T-shirts, and when I got there I had to buy a warm coat, a rain mac and boots. But it was amazing. I'd never been to Australia before – I had a bit of time off and I went travelling to Cairns. I went to a koala sanctuary and took a trip through the rainforest in an old steam train.

What do you look for in a role?

I like strong women; I think that probably comes from playing Tina McIntyre in Corrie when I was 19 years old. When I'm reading for these characters I feel a fire in my belly. When I left Corrie, I wanted the next thing to be right, and it was the same when I finished Our Girl and Brassic. I take time to think, "What's the next step?"

Do you find people want to typecast you?

Yeah. Don't get me wrong, I'm very lucky with the roles I've chosen but there have been brilliant scripts which are very similar to something I've just done. You think, "This would be great at another time but let's try and change it up a little bit." It's hard to say no, though.

You were cast in Coronation Street after only your second-ever audition. What was it like going back to auditions after that?

The TV stories that are getting us talking...

NEW HORIZONS

Terrifying. I never in my wildest dreams thought I'd get Corrie so I went along to that audition with the mindset that it would just be good experience.

Then, after seven years, to go back into the big wide world again was scary. A soap is so safe.

There's a lot of interest in your private life because you're married to reality star and radio DJ Mark Wright. How do you manage that?

I grew up being in the media, and my outlook on it changed as I was growing up. I stopped enjoying it as much and I wanted a bit more privacy. It was just a thing that slowly happened where I grew the confidence to say that I wanted to keep some things to myself.

What would it surprise people to know about you?

Maybe that my most comfortable isn't when I'm glam – it's wearing no make-up at home in my jammies on the couch with the dogs. And I'm a good cook. I do a good gambas piri piri. I'll still get dressed up now and again for a red carpet, but they're very few and far between.

Well, in Ten Pound Poms you still look quite glam. Would you ever want to do something totally the opposite?

If the role was right, yes, I'd strip it back, get my hair greasy, anything. I dreamt of doing a period drama, and I'm currently filming my first proper thriller, so I'm totally open to whatever speaks to me.

You're an Essex girl now. Do you love it, or do you miss the north?

Well, the weather's good! I'm in Essex for a few weeks, I get itchy feet and want to go back up north for a bit and vice versa. I don't understand why you can't get chips and gravy down south. I go for pie and mash but I don't like the liquor, so I get gravy and I'm like, "Why has gravy not taken off here? It's so much nicer!"

You started acting young – what would you have done if it hadn't worked out?

When I decided to leave Corrie, I remember coming to terms with the idea of not acting again. I always said to myself, "If I don't get a job after this, at least I've had a good run: not many people can say they've had this career for six and a half years." The decision to leave was always a risk but it was the right thing for me at the time, so I'd never have regretted it. If it hadn't worked out, I'd have done something to do with dogs – that's my happy place.

Keira Knightley's latest drama series is set at Christmas, but don't expect much festive cheer. 'I'M YET TO MEET A STUPID ADDICT'

Boy band star Matt Willis had been to rehab three times before he was 25 – now he's made a searingly honest documentary about addiction

In the opening scenes of musician Matt Willis's candid documentary on addiction, his wife Emma is shown leafing through the pages of an old diary. Usually hidden away in a little-used drawer, its pages contain only a daily record of her husband's alcohol use and the state it left him in. "Totally wasted," reads a typical entry.

"Of course, that's only what she saw – I was doing a lot more in the background, because addicts are very good at hiding everything," Willis says now, reflecting on the footage. "I'm yet to meet a stupid addict. They're conniving and manipulative."

The 40-year-old singer and bass guitarist – one third of the successful noughties pop-punk band Busted – admits to being both of those things when he was in the throes of an addiction to booze and drugs that has dominated most of his adult life. Thrust to fame at 19, Willis had been to rehab three times before the age of 25, including just weeks before his 2008 wedding to TV presenter Emma.

He hasn't had a drink since, but relapsed six years ago when he took cocaine while on a reunion tour in 2017 when his daughter Trixie – the youngest of his three children – was just ten months old. "Within a month I was doing six grammes on my own every day and not coming home until three in the morning," he says in the documentary.

Although now clean and sober, Willis carries an ongoing terror of returning to those dark times. In the programme, he explores what is behind his behaviour and if science can offer hope against compulsions so strong they sometimes feel physical. A deeply personal watch, it also looks at the impact on The Voice presenter Emma, who is frequently close to tears as she tells of her fear that her husband's addictions would kill him, plus her gnawing unease that he will relapse again.

"It was hard for me to see how much that fear was still prevalent for her," Willis says, before adding that the documentary made the couple "realise that we still had some talking to do".

It's one of several other revelations Willis confronted while filming, among them the legacy of a troubled childhood – his mum and dad divorced when he was three and he had a "heated" relationship with his stepfather – and the fact that his destructive drinking started early.

"I was young, and I was always the one taking it way further than I should have," he reflects. "The number of blackout moments [due to drinking] I had even up to the age of 20 was huge."

The advent of Busted meant a six-figure record deal, global adulation and easy access to drugs before Willis had exited his teens. More than 20 years on, his youth is now underlined in archive footage that shows a baby-faced but hyper young man on Jonathan Ross's chat show.

"That was hardest for me to watch," Willis says, "because I'm looking at myself and I'm 20 years old or something and I'm obviously off my face."

Behind the scenes, the musician had slid into full-blown addiction: by his early 20s, he couldn't get to midday without alcohol or drugs. "It's not rock 'n' roll; it wasn't glamorous, it was really sad," he says.

Stints in rehab followed, but Willis often lied to therapists while in a state of denial, and now admits that he "had to get to that point where I was willing to listen".

More recently, therapy has proved beneficial, given Willis greater understanding of his compulsions and allowed him to feel compassion for his younger self. "I had such a hateful way with myself, but if you look back and you can say, 'You poor little bugger, what were you doing?' That's a different way of looking at the past."

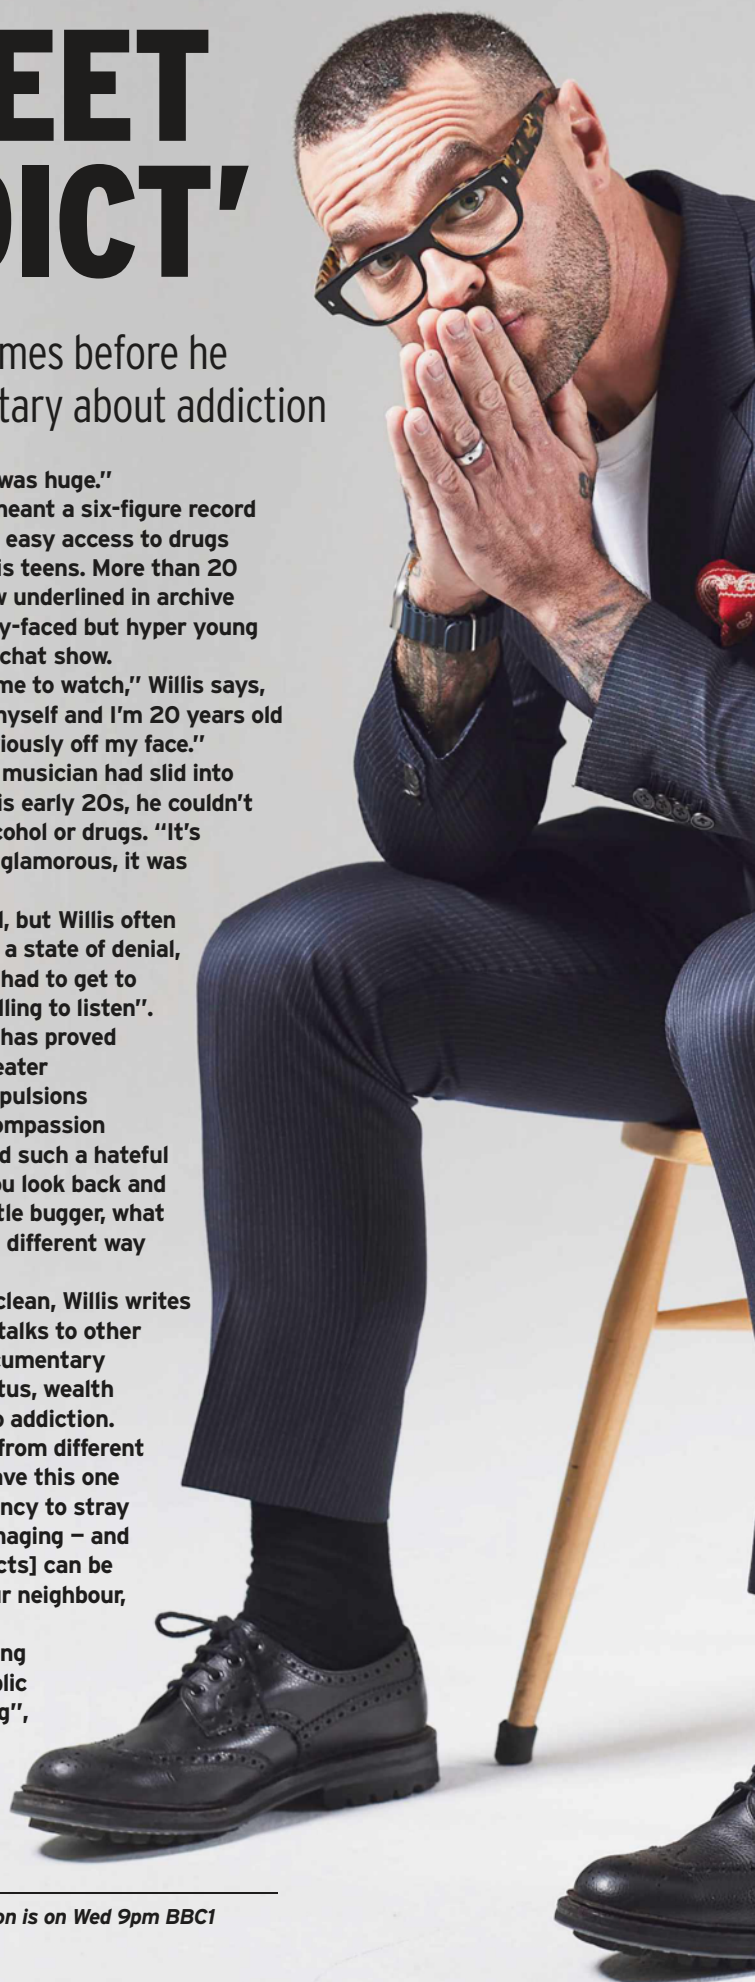

Now intent on staying clean, Willis writes a daily gratitude list and talks to other addicts. He hopes his documentary reminds viewers that status, wealth and age are no barriers to addiction.

"I meet regular people from different walks of life, and we all have this one thing in common: a tendency to stray into things which are damaging – and we can't stop. They [addicts] can be anyone: your brother, your neighbour, your friend."

Willis admits that putting his programme in the public sphere is "nerve-wracking", even if it's for the best.

"It's hard for me to watch, which I think probably means it's good." KATHRYN KNIGHT

FORGET TASTE

In this job you have to have good taste in music, but you also have to have no taste. That's super exciting for me and my generation. We weren't about albums, we were about playlists that were completely genre-less and all over the place.

ENTERING THE INDUSTRY

Studying music at university, I created playlists for events and got musicians involved, which helped get my foot in the door. Then an office assistant job at [music company] Air Edel came up, where I still work as a music supervisor. I'm in charge of all music in a TV production.

GETTING IN THE CLEAR

Any song is owned by the writer and also by the label or artist that releases it. To use that song in a TV series, you have to "clear" it. I tell the person what rights I need and give them a fee. Then I negotiate how much something should be worth and I get the go ahead... hopefully.

PROMINENCE IS PRICEY

If you're using a song over titles and end credits, or if someone's singing, that costs more.

CASH FOR CASH

On Bad Sisters, we were trying to clear Johnny Cash's version of God's Gonna Cut You Down, but the cost was going up and up. It wasn't going to be workable, so I got singer PJ Harvey to cover it instead.

WHAT STRANGER THINGS DID

The huge success of Kate Bush's Running Up That Hill [after it featured on the Netflix show] was exciting. It showed the capacity an audience has for rediscovering music through television. If you're selling people a world, they'll invest in its music in a way they maybe wouldn't if they were just hearing it on the radio.

MAKE IT PERSONAL

We persuaded Richard Carpenter to let us use Top of the World for After Life by sending him the scene and a letter from Ricky Gervais, who is a huge music aficionado. It's important to give very detailed analysis of what's happening in the scene, but also of the emotional motivation behind why you want to use a song. CRAIG McLEAN

MY FATAL ATTRACTION

Our raunchy cinematic past is back – but on TV. Don't get sucked in!

“I'M NOT GOING to be ignored, Dan!” It's a threat that's echoed down the years, first bawled by Alex (Glenn Close) in Fatal Attraction the film way back in 1987, and now repeated by new Alex (Lizzy Caplan) in the Paramount+ eight-part TV reboot. Yes, EIGHT parts. Perhaps that will give them time to allow notorious pet-killer Alex some sort of plausible back-story. By the sound of it, women scorned haven't got any less demanding. Calm down, ladies, can't a happily married chap play away occasionally without consequences?

Men are powerless, you see. That is well illustrated in Obsession, a new Netflix spin on Damage, the Louis Malle film from 1992. Here we have the older successful man (Richard Armitage), capable of carrying out pioneering surgery but apparently powerless to resist the charms of his son's girlfriend (Charlie Murphy). Their eyes meet across a crowded room and before you know it, he's popping an olive in her mouth. This is a sure televisual sign that a display of some serious sexual athleticism is heading our way. But let's give Obsession its due: it's a mere four episodes of implausible tosh and pretty enjoyable. Is it erotic? Not really. When Armitage made passionate, despairing love to a pillow in a Paris hotel room, I'm afraid I laughed. Sorry. I could tell he was giving it everything. And the pillow looked pretty satisfied, to be fair.

‘I was as helpless as an older man flattered by a younger woman’

SO, OUR RAUNCHY cinematic past is back but on TV, where it can go on a lot longer. Great news if you've got time on your hands. And the streamers have you in their clutches – they make hours of entertainment, every episode ending on a cliffhanger, the next one always just seconds away. That ends on a cliffhanger, too, so you're stuck. You'll have to act quickly to stop yourself being sucked in to the next one. Why get up to unload the dishwasher when you could just do another one?

If I've made it sound like quite an effort, sometimes it really does feel that way. After the first episode of Obsession ended, I had no intention of watching any more. Until, immediately, I did. I was as helpless as a distinguished middle-aged man in a glossy TV series flattered by the attention of a younger woman.

Feminist academics have long had the original Fatal Attraction in their sights, and you can't blame them. Leading lady Alex was single, with something called a career (warning sign!) and a mass of untamed blonde curls. This is a Hair Klaxon, and signals a woman of easy virtue.

In the film, Alex was quite potty, naturally, and ended up dead, killed by her lover's dutiful wife. Yes, kids, this is what passed for a happy ending in the 1980s. Will the 21st-century version offer a fresh perspective? Surely no rabbits will be harmed? The series starts with Dan being released from prison after serving a stretch for Alex's murder, but he's maintaining his innocence. Which is just as well, as there are eight episodes to fill here – and even a hint that there may be a second series. Dig in, then. If you must.

Fifty years ago there was a Goon in the blooms on the cover of Radio Times, photographed by Allan Ballard. Comedy whirlwind Spike Milligan was hosting his third collection of songs and sketches based on a season. “The show opens with the crocuses coming out,” he explained. “They should be croci but the people don't speak Latin.” He had a natural affinity with LOUIS THEROUX won't win a Bafta this year – in fact, he wasn't nominated – but he doesn't really need any more cluttering up the house. In his three-decades-long documentary career, he's already bagged five golden masks for the mantelpiece and, since his early days on Michael Moore's TV Nation, through Louis Theroux's Weird Weekends, When Louis Met... and all his modern documentaries, he's racked up a CV most film-makers would be happy to retire on. But Theroux's not resting on his laurels just yet.

"As you get older, you do think about obsolescence, and you think that there are younger people doing brilliant work," Theroux, 52, tells me when we meet in a London hotel after RT's photoshoot.

"I certainly don't take my position, such as it is, for granted. I think it's a terrible look when you see high-profile people on TV acting as though they have a permanent position, like a freehold on the real estate of broadcasting."

It's a typically astute observation from a man who's carved a niche as a chronicler of the human condition. Of course, once upon a time Theroux himself was the young upstart of documentary film-making, a disarming, faux naïf figure who managed to get his subjects to open up through deadpan questioning. He says that, back then, he was "just grateful to have a place at the table" – but presumably now, the experienced film-maker is more confident than the uneasy, earnest figure we see on screen. Is he playing more of a role than he used to?

"But that's who I am, really," he insists. "I would like to think that I'm still the same person, and from time to time I get little glimpses of remembering how insecure and how much of an outsider I used to feel when I was in my early and mid-20s."

Today, he says, his old insecurities have been replaced by new ones – a need to keep at the cutting edge, to not let the grass grow under his feet. Ironically, even if he did nothing, his career longevity seems assured with the burgeoning brand Theroux – several spin-off books (including two memoirs), a podcast, Grounded, a novelty rap single, dedicated fan sites online and a share in a production company, Mindhouse, where he now helps develop documentaries that he doesn't necessarily front himself. At this stage, Theroux could probably just cash in, living off his past successes and name recognition – but instead, he's still trying to walk a tightrope between fame and fact-finding.

"I know I'm a kind of hybrid figure," he says. "I occupy a space somewhere between a proper documentary-maker on one hand and, on the other, a kind of TV personality."

"I do say yes to more things now. I used to be almost monastically resistant to anything that smelled too much of showbusiness: premieres or award shows if I wasn't nominated. But then I got a bit older, I opened up about my private life in my books. And I just thought, 'Do you know what? I shouldn't be too puritanical about doing things that sit outside the remit of: what would Werner Herzog do?'"

Throughout our conversation, he remains remarkably deadpan, not once cracking a smile even as he accepts compliments or displays bursts of wit. One might assume he's just had plenty of practice using his poker face over years of interviewing – but he argues this is, genuinely, what he's like.

"I've never been good at disguising my emotions or playing someone else," he says. "I would have dreamt of being a kind of Chris Morris, or a prankish figure. But I think as time went on, I just became more comfortable allowing the on-camera me to be closer to the real me."

"I couldn't help being who I am."

He shrugs.

Louis Theroux's documentaries are available to watch on iPlayer

MY FIRST TV MEMORY IS... Crown Court. You know how odd bits of cultural flotsam just stick with you? It had very distinctive theme music.

I WAS OBSESSED WITH... writing for TV. Sitcoms in the early 90s – like Seinfeld and Larry Sanders and The Simpsons and Frasier. Those felt like art of a high level, and maybe something I could participate in.

MY BIG BREAK WAS... never televised. I was working on a magazine called Spy, but then MTV came along and wanted me to do a one-minute monologue. They were going to use dolls to re-enact real-life situations, like pranks and scrapes. My monologue didn't get used. And I don't think the pilot got picked up. But it was a glimpse of something.

I'VE LEARNT... that TV will always change. My kids, especially the eight-year-old, more or less subsist on YouTube content. I hope we don't get so fragmented that we're all just siloed in our respective news and entertainment feeds. That wouldn't be good.

Japanese cartoons. I lived in Japan until I was eight, so my earliest TV memories are watching Japanese cartoons like Doraemon and Anpanman – or Dragon Ball Z. But I also had VHS tapes of Mr Bean, and I loved him as well.

This year, Sharon Horgan's Apple TV+ series Bad Sisters, a black comedy about five Irish siblings bound together by their brother-in-law's death, is up for a best drama series Bafta and, more than anything else, she's relieved. "Yeah, thank God, right?" the 52-year-old Irish actor, writer, director and producer laughs when we connect over Zoom. "It would have been weird being in the Bafta edition of Radio Times without that. I was a bit worried..."

"A more well-rounded person would tune it out because sometimes there's no rhyme nor reason to it. I attach too much importance to awards. But then I also kind of laugh it off a bit. We were happy and delighted [to be nominated]. It's a bit silly, because it should be about making a great piece of work. But you do find yourself wanting your peers to say, 'Well done.'"

If you cast a glance at Horgan's CV, it's a smorgasbord of cult classics and critically lauded hits, including Pulling, Catastrophe, Motherland and Divorce. And as we speak she has a hand in eight ongoing or upcoming TV series (that we know of – she hints at more), some as actor, some as writer or creator and some as executive producer through her company Merman.

Among these is the second series of Bad Sisters – "The scripts are all there, piled behind me," she says – which she co-writes, produces and stars in. On top of that, she regularly crops up in movies – last year, she played Nicolas Cage's wife in The Unbearable Weight of Massive Talent, and the year before that she was in the movie of musical Everybody's Talking about Jamie. She also has two teenage daughters. How does she fit it all in?

"There's a lot of stuff in my email inbox," she agrees. "I just compartmentalise, you know? At the moment, it's a little bit hard. I literally just flew back from LA, and I'm completely banjaxed, jetlag-wise. But for the most part, when I'm doing one thing, I'll just be doing that. I catch up on another couple of things when I down tools on whatever I'm writing."

At which point, Horgan's daughter bursts into the room with an announcement – she's just been accepted to university. True to form, Horgan manages to juggle celebrating with her family and completing this interview – once RT has expressed suitable felicitations.

"Congratulations from the Radio Times!" Horgan says. "Oh my God, honey. I'm going to make you breakfast in a minute."

Given how much else is on her plate, it's slightly surprising that she opted to make a second series of Bad Sisters, originally intended as a one-off. Now critically acclaimed and Bafta-nominated, it makes obvious business sense for the show to come back – but does she worry about diminishing returns?

"Well, thanks a lot!" she laughs. "It's true, I had no intention of doing any more, but while we were on set I kept thinking of this one idea that could be a possible second season. The first series did have a lovely end, but I think when you kill a man, when you put yourself through that – and there were five of them in it – life is going to change. You don't just dust yourself off and get on with your life. I was interested in what would happen to these women next. And we'll find out."

But for now, she has to leave – because in the kitchen, she has another mini-project to crack on with. "There is something I need to do – I can go give my daughter a hug now," she says. "I'm really excited."

MY FIRST TV MEMORY IS... Dynasty and Dallas. I was a massive soaps kid. They probably played a big part in why I love a story.

MY BIG BREAK WAS... Pulling. That was the first sitcom that Dennis [Kelly] and I wrote together, and it was my first starring role – that I very kindly gave to myself. Before that I'd done bits and pieces.

I'VE LEARNT... perfectionism. I got some very good advice, which was just, "That's not good enough". It's hard to hear, but you need to keep working on something over and over before it's ever going to get good.

JOE LYCETT started out with a traditional stand-up career but the 36-year-old has morphed recently into an unlikely satirical campaigner, using TV and social media to take on the rich and powerful. "One thing they don't want is press. They just want to be getting on with things," says Lycett. "There are stunts like the one that we did in the first series of Joe Lycett's Got Your Back where I pretended to be the CEO of RBS, and managed to get back thousands of pounds for one of their customers, who'd been scammed. There's just such a buzz to that."

Other stunts include legally changing his name to Hugo Boss (to shame the clothing company for going after small companies with a similar name). Then on Channel 4 chat show Steph's Packed Lunch, he highlighted single-use plastic bottles used by drinks company Yop, by contriving to storm off the set in outrage.

In September, he turned his attention to politics when he brought the first episode of Laura Kuenssberg's Sunday-morning show to a standstill when he appeared as a guest, wrong-footing his host by claiming to be "very right wing" and a Liz Truss supporter.

But perhaps his highest-profile stunt came last autumn when he took on David Beckham in a campaign that landed him on this year's Bafta nominations list (for the accompanying documentary). Lycett threatened to shred £10,000 if Beckham didn't remove himself as an ambassador for the World Cup, noting Qatar's poor human rights record (especially when it came to LGBTQ fans).

There followed a media storm that Lycett could never have predicted. While most reaction was supportive, some raged against his apparent profligacy, while others accused him of hypocrisy, as Lycett had previously admitted, early in his career he had a couple of gigs in Qatar himself (albeit paid by a UK comedy promoter). Either way, everyone was talking about the Beckham stunt.

"That had the most impact ever," he says. "Someone estimated that I got about £3 million worth of press out of it." In the end his pleas went unanswered, and Beckham kept his role. But in the months since, with the dust settled, did he ever hear from Beckham himself?

"Yes, we got a statement from his people, which was insufficient, if I were being kind, and sort of rude and dangerous if I'm not," he says. "It wasn't written by him. It sort of said something along the lines of, 'How good it is that we're having conversations about things.' And that smacked to me as being from a similar copybook to Trump's 'There are good people on both sides'. It's sort of saying human rights are up for debate. But at least we know where we are with him now."

A moment later, he relents a little. "I actually think [Beckham's] probably a good egg, but he's just got some people around him who are also probably getting some of that sweet Qatari cash."

Whether it's the Qatari government or oil companies, Lycett is sanguine about clashing with deep-pocketed figures – perhaps it helps that, despite his offbeat campaigns, he has a team who do deep background and legal research on targets "to within an inch of their lives" before he as much as composes a tweet. During the storm, adrenaline takes over. "When there's a company coming at you, your horns are locked, and that's when the anxiety goes because you're focusing on the tussle."

I WAS OBSESSED WITH... theatre! My school was really, really good at giving us access to performing arts. We'd put a play on. We'd put a musical on. I played Bugsy Malone.

MY BIG BREAK WAS... Bridgerton. I'd done a lot of stage work, and things like Holby City, but Bridgerton's the biggest TV series that I've done. Obviously, it dropped at Christmas in 2020, and the whole thing blew up and became this amazing experience. It's pushing boundaries of representation and inclusion. But still, at the heart of it, it's about love.

I'VE LEARNT... to keep going. I'd tell my 17-year-old self, "It gets better." Whenever there are those moments where you're like, "God, this is really hard, this is really tough", there's that little voice where you go, "Maybe I can do this. Maybe this is something I can put my mind to."

I WAS OBSESSED WITH... the 2004 Paralympics. Watching Athens 2004 when I was nine was when my dream started, and my awareness that there was disability sport out there. If I hadn't watched that, I wouldn't have gone to Beijing four years later. TV is powerful!

STRICTLY WAS... scarier than the Paralympics. When I was doing sport, I was so focused I just didn't think about the people watching. But I've definitely felt it doing things like Strictly. It certainly helped with awareness of dwarfism.

I'VE LEARNT... to keep competitive. I'm always that person looking for the next challenge. I think I'm done with reality TV. But in any walk of life, I think I'm always going to be looking for something to dig my teeth into.

The haircut that launched the 60s

As a boy Nick Broomfield met Rolling Stone Brian Jones – now six decades on, he revisits the tragic story of a rock 'n' roll icon

INTERVIEW BY DAVID HEPWORTH

IT WAS THE 60s. Future documentary-maker Nick Broomfield, at the time a 14-year-old, was taking the train back to his boarding school in the West Country when he noticed one of his fellow passengers happened to be Brian Jones of the Rolling Stones. With thoughts of an autograph he ducked into the first class carriage. Then, after securing the signature, he was invited to stay.

The thing Broomfield remembers about the subsequent encounter, apart from the fact that the man who founded the Rolling Stones turned out to be unexpectedly well spoken, was that Brian still had a schoolboy hobby. "I went in to the compartment to meet a rabble-rouser and he turned out to be a train-spotter," he recalls 60 years later of the encounter he regards as a key moment in his life. Train-spotting was certainly the last thing outraged adults would have expected from the man beneath what was at the time the world's most controversial head of hair.

ROCK 'N' ROLL has always been about hair, and the shaggy bowl sported by Brian Jones in the mid-60s can claim to be among the most influential. Normal domestic life would be paused every time he and the Rolling Stones appeared on Ready Steady Go! or Thank Your Lucky Stars in those days in order that the whole family could inspect it. Fathers would eventually feel compelled to ask, "Is that a boy or a girl?", teenage boys would try to summon a suitably withering riposte while teenage girls... well, they would stay quiet and drink him in. If you were going to pick one person who seemed to embody all the promise and threat of the 60s and could project it by simply standing there and looking at a camera from beneath his fringe, that person was Brian Jones.

People wanted to be like Brian. American groups like the Byrds recruited members purely because they had Jones-type hair. In later years his became the standard haircut of indie rock. The members of Oasis, the Stone Roses and the Strokes all went through phases where they clearly wished to pass for Brian. Ditto Bobby Gillespie of Primal Scream. Strangely, Bobby is sitting in the next row of the preview theatre where Broomfield's documentary film The Stones and Brian Jones is being screened. Even today people can't get enough of Brian.

'The rabblrouser turned out to be a train-spotter'

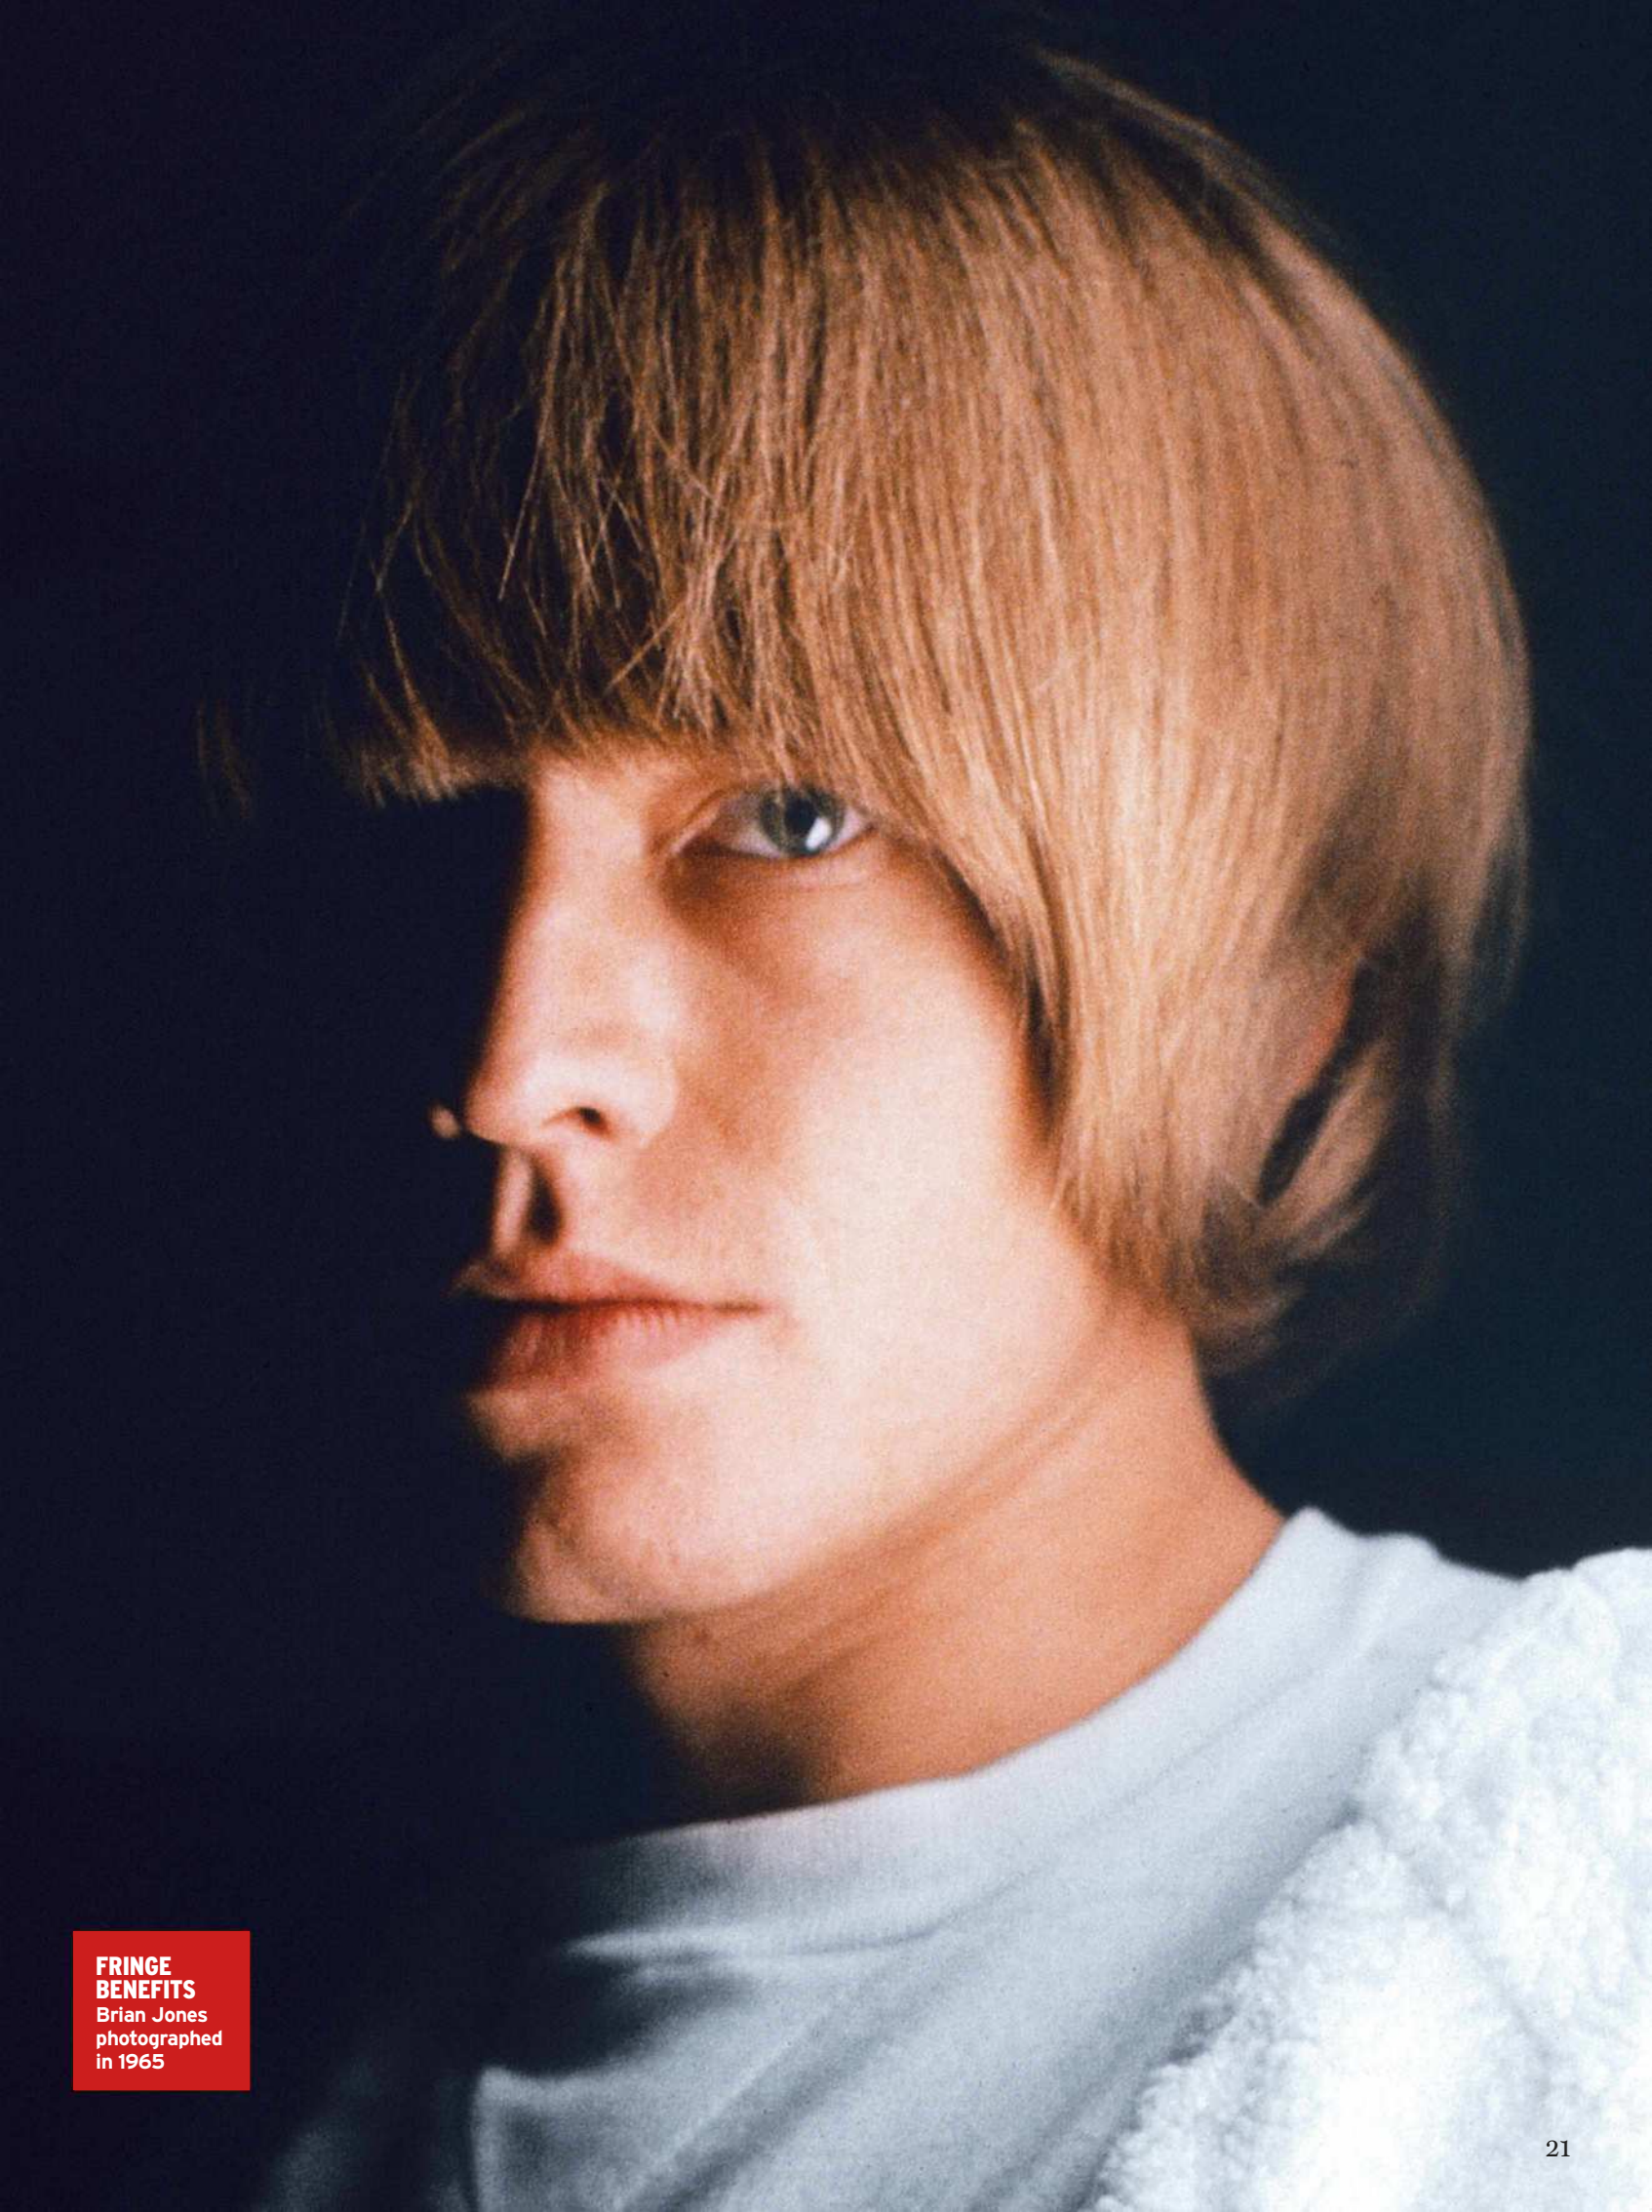

NICK BROOMFIELD

More than 50 years after his death in 1969 at the age of 27, Brian remains a hero to the indie boys largely because his story is so short and so tragic. When the Rolling Stones came roaring out of the Richmond rhythm and blues scene in 1963 he was their leader.

He was the one who had given them their name, he was the one who was the greatest evangelist for rhythm and blues and even said he would hate them to be thought of as a rock 'n' roll band. He was so devoted to the idea of the blues that he had briefly tried to launch himself upon London as Elmo Lewis. In those early days he got the most girl reaction – to filch the words of that famous Stones song – and also received the most fan mail, much of which, as the film shows, he dutifully answered in the stiff-blazered style of the well brought up grammar school boy from Cheltenham that he was.

By 1965, when the band he had begun were scream idols and (I Can't Get No) Satisfaction was on the world's transistors, he was on his way to being sidelined. One of the clips that Broomfield's team has unearthed for this film is of him being forced on camera to admit that questions >

◁ about the songs would be more properly addressed to their composers Mick Jagger and Keith Richards. Furthermore, there's a tape of him abandoning a song he was trying to write. "Brian simply didn't have that discipline," Broomfield says.

By 1969 he was lost in depression and drugs, his erstwhile girlfriend Anita Pallenberg had left him for Keith Richards and, since the band judged that he was too unreliable to take on the road, he was informed he was being replaced. At least Mick, Keith and Charlie did the deed in person. This is a task most bands prefer to leave to their manager. A few weeks later he was found dead in the pool of his country home in East Sussex. Two days after that Mick opened the Stones show in London's Hyde Park by reciting some Shelley in Brian's memory. Thousands of butterflies were released and immediately died, providing a metaphor for the end of the 60s that is unlikely to be bettered.

LOOKING BACK ON these events in 2012 in their official film Crossfire Hurricane, Keith felt that Brian's death had been inevitable for some time, while Mick reflected that maybe they could have done something to prevent such a tragic outcome. That sounds like the 21st century talking. Back in 1969, there was no counselling. There was no hugging it out in those days, particularly in the world of the Rolling Stones, who, like all of us, had more in common with their parents than they knew.

Broomfield didn't bother asking Mick and Keith to take part in his film. "I just felt it was asking for trouble," he says. In a long career that has seen him make documentaries about serial killer Aileen Wuornos and Hollywood madam Heidi Fleiss, as well as diva Whitney Houston and rappers Biggie and Tupac, he has come to the conclusion that music stars are the most desirous of controlling the narrative and the least likely to grant permission to use the material a film-maker would ideally like. Therefore he has adopted a "Don't ask permission, ask forgiveness" approach and says, "I think you should make the film you want to make."

Making the film he wanted to make was beset by quite enough challenges. The events it depicts are 60 years ago and therefore a lot of people who owned the material have passed away and it was necessary to deal with their estates. Getting access to recorded music is never easy. "Thankfully a lot of the Stones' early music was written by other people, and if you use live performances you can get round the rights problems. Then you're interviewing a lot of people who are in their late 70s. Some of them are well preserved but if they went to town back in the day they generally don't look great. You meet them and you think, 'What happened to them?' I found I had to take everybody out visually and just use their words. Otherwise people wouldn't be listening to what they're saying so much as thinking, 'What happened to this guy?'"

One person who does make it to the screen is the 86-year-old Bill Wyman, the band's original bass player, who is seen at his computer, cueing up old Stones recordings such as Ruby Tuesday and pointing out that Brian's judicious addition of unexpected instruments was so often a vital ingredient in the band's rock 'n' roll stew.

"That wasn't supposed to happen," says Broomfield of Wyman's appearance in the film. "They were worrying about where to put the camera and lights and I just pulled out my iPhone and said, 'Why don't we do it right now?' He was totally relaxed because I was doing it on my iPhone. His contributions are very uplifting. He looks like a magical pixie."

'By 1969 Brian was lost in depression and drugs...'

The Stones and Brian Jones may prove to be one of the last films about the 60s to be made by somebody who knows the actual 60s through having lived in them rather than having read about them in a book. "One of the pleasures of making it was going back and looking at what was a formative time for me. In many ways it was a very rigid time. Brian's parents had a lot of expectations for him to be a doctor or lawyer rather than doing what he did. He in turn was desperate for their approval, which came much too late."

What Broomfield's film has in common with Peter Jackson's recent documentary on the Beatles, Get Back, is the fact that while the young rock stars appear eternally glamorous and wholly contemporary, the non-famous characters such as Brian's parents or the unfortunate young women he impregnated and abandoned in Cheltenham seem like quaint bit players from a film set in a Britain that is now vanished and gone.

The speed at which that mighty wind blew through the country during a crammed decade, the distance travelled from the London of Saturday Club to the London of free concerts in Hyde Park, a transformation that took place in a period about as long as the gap between Adele releases, is impossible for a dilatory present to quite get its head round. "I think people barely slept for a number of those years. A new world was coming, which was an enormous departure from the pre-war world. That's what the 60s kicked off.

"People suspended judgement in the 60s in a way and all hell broke loose and there was an amazing plethora of artistic achievements and then everyone got a bit frightened again. We're now at the other end of the spectrum with none of those particular kinds of freedoms. The whole 'woke' thing is a different puritanism. It's judgemental in the same way that our parents were."

BROOMFIELD, WHO CONFESSES he is only capable of working on one project at a time, is not in a position to announce what he might do next but hopes he can continue to work in the same way even though, he says, "the documentary world is definitely changing".

He adds, "The streamers are a bunch of pies. They want everything to be authorised before they make a film. They would never have made this film without the permission of Mick and Keith. I have had a whole career based on getting my initial money from England, from the BBC or Channel 4. We're so lucky to have them because they're far more investigative, far more interested in getting to the bottom of things, and they love a bit of controversy. I would then get the rest of the budget by selling the films in America.

"There are now so many streamers and there's still the same size audience. A lot of them are having to show a profit by firing people and commissioning less stuff. They don't want to take any risks. You make a silly commission and your head's on the block. America has generally picked stuff up from British broadcasters. It's very conservative, whereas the BBC and Channel 4 are much more ground-breaking. They've always been the innovators."

Below: Graham Norton will be presenting in Liverpool
Right: Mae Muller sings the UK's entry

IT'S 14 YEARS since Graham Norton first took up his post as the UK's lead commentator at the Eurovision Song Contest, picking up the baton from the beloved Terry Wogan, who did so much to put the show on the map for viewers across the world.

This year, due to the war in Ukraine and thanks to Sam Ryder finishing in second place with Space Man last year, the UK is hosting the final for the first time since 1998, and Norton will again be following in Wogan's footsteps.

He will be presenting from the stage at the Liverpool Arena alongside Alesha Dixon, Hannah Waddingham and Ukrainian singer Julia Sanina, and is clearly aware of the delicate balance required on the night. "I feel a duty to do our Ukrainian friends proud and deliver a show like no other that will showcase the best of British and Ukrainian culture and creativity – from Liverpool, of course, a city renowned the world over for its musical heritage."

As for his double duties on the night, Norton isn't fazed. "Of course I couldn't resist stepping into the commentary box for our UK audience. I cannot wait to watch what all the 37 participating countries have got in store."

Despite his longtime ringside seat, Norton struggles to put his finger on any singular aspect that gives the contest its extraordinary status and staying power. "It isn't just one thing that makes Eurovision so special. It's the collective element – everyone is there to have fun, celebrate with wonderful music and come together in an inclusive and creative space."

EUROPE SINGS OUT!

THE UK ENTRY

'MUM'S A HUGE ABBA FAN'

Mae Muller has adored Eurovision since she was a child. Now the 25-year-old is representing the UK with I Wrote a Song

How did your Eurovision journey begin?

I wrote the song in January and then, just a few days later, my management called to say, "How do you feel about Eurovision?" I thought, "Is this some kind of joke? I've only just written it!"

What are your earliest memories of Eurovision?

Eurovision has been part of my life for ever. My mum is a huge Abba fan – she introduced me to their music when I was really young, and then I learnt they came from Eurovision, so that sparked my interest.

Do you have a favourite past winning song?

Abba are my lifelong favourite pop musicians. And I loved [2018 winner] Netta's Toy. Her message was quite similar to my song – we're empowering ourselves.

How has taking part in Eurovision changed things for you?

I've never talked this much in my life! Fortunately, I love to chat. Before, a lot of young girls and women followed me, but now a wider field of people know who I am, people of all ages. I'm very flattered.

How do you manage the pressure of representing the host country?

It drives me to work even harder. Sam Ryder doing so well last year is only a good thing, for the UK as a whole and for me following in his footsteps. It's a lot easier to take things in your stride when there's a lot of positivity around the contest.

Why is Eurovision so important and enduring?

Community and togetherness – whatever is going on in the world, it's important to have that. It's an outlet of originality and creativity, and it's fun.

What advice have you received?

Sam told me, "Enjoy it, take every day as it comes." The other contestants I've met so far have been lovely. I forget sometimes we're competing against each other, because everyone is so friendly and supportive. It feels like a family. CF

THE FAVOURITE

'YOU HAVE TO BE AUTHENTIC'

Sweden's Loreen won Eurovision in 2012 with Euphoria. Now aged 39, she is the bookies' favourite to repeat the feat this year with Tattoo

What was the biggest Eurovision lesson you gained from your win in 2012?

I followed the flow. I'm a shy person, and people were saying things like, "Why is she barefoot?" and "I can't see her eyes." But you have to be authentic.

At what point did you realise victory was yours?

Going into the contest, I didn't want to know anything about it, the rules or anything. So when we got the scores, I didn't understand why people were cheering. I leant across to my producer and asked, "Are the people going to vote now?" He replied, "You've won!"

Describe that moment as best you can.

It changed everything. I was standing there and realised, "This is what happens when you follow your intuition." There was so much love in the arena. It was the most beautiful thing I had ever been through.

And you're back. Why now?

You think you know where you're going, but sometimes... I never thought in my wildest dreams this would happen. I kept saying, "Life, are you sure you want me to go this way?" But it was my path.

What's the secret of a Eurovision-winning song?

Whether it's a ballad or a rock song, it needs to come from an authentic place; everything has to be real. But I'm not going to lie, my song's dynamics do their work, starting soft and then bursting into the chorus.

How will you prepare? Food, focus and plenty of sleep! CF

WINNERS 1997: KATRINA AND THE WAVES

'IT'S LIKE MISS UNIVERSE'

Katrina Leskanich remembers the night, 26 years ago, when Katrina and the Waves became the last UK act to win Eurovision

“WHEN YOU’RE IN these competitions, the other songs don’t so much grow on you as lose their offensiveness,” Katrina Leskanich is remembering how she and her band the Waves felt the first glimmers of doubt as they surveyed their rivals in the UK’s pre-selection round in 1997. “One was a woman called Kerry, and her song was Yodel in the Canyon of Love. That song gave us a run for our money, but we got through.”

Katrina and the Waves were already stars thanks to their 1985 hit Walking on Sunshine, and it came as much of a surprise to Leskanich as Eurovision fans to find the band representing the UK with Love Shine a Light, not least because they’d recorded it four years earlier. “We hadn’t put it on an album,” Leskanich, 63, recalls. “It had gone in the bottom drawer because somebody said, ‘It’s a bit too Eurovisiony.’”

While Leskanich didn’t quite have that era’s customary wholesome look for the contest – “It that then, but now, having watched 289 Eurovisions, I have a better idea.”

Today, 26 years later, the contest has grown into a colossus in comparison. “It’s still a curiosity, a bit like Miss Universe. The UK hasn’t always put forward its best music, but other countries do, and their cultural aspects are captivating. The buxom milkmaids bent down, cleavage falling out over the pails of milk, the babushkas... You don’t know where to look, but you keep looking.”

Upbeat songs are the keepers in Leskanich’s book. “I can’t stand these dreary ballads full of self-importance. You want to get some goosebumps moving in the room. That’s what happened for us. We had some crackle and pop, and we were in.”

The band’s eventual victory – the UK’s first since Bucks Fizz in 1981 – caught everyone on the hop, including the band themselves. “Even backstage, when it looked as though we couldn’t be overtaken, people were saying, ‘Don’t get too excited.’ So we just sat there, guzzling champagne. The thing I didn’t realise was that if you won you had to perform again – so, 300 sheets to the wind, I felt the hand of Ronan Keating on my shoulder, ‘Come on, love.’ Out of tune, out of time, the wrong words, utter chaos.

“I glanced up and Terry Wogan had a Guinness in one hand and a glass of champagne in the other, and was balancing an Irish whiskey on his head. Good times.” CF was still squeaky clean back then, and I was busy trying to look like Nico from the Velvet Underground,” she says – she was given a stack of videos by the BBC and swotted up on the competition. But the BBC’s suggestion that the Kansas-born singer tone down her accent was, Leskanich says, a step too far. “I told them that would be me impersonating Dick Van Dyke, and it wasn’t going to be possible.”

THEIR TRIP TO Dublin for the final sounds equally bonkers. “Compared to today, it was like a small barn dance, very intimate. The hosts RTE were wandering around saying, ‘We can’t win, it’s breaking the bank.’ We knew all the other artists, and every night another country would host a party.

“We were very close with Terry Wogan and he really believed in the song. He was quite buoyant, but other people kept saying, ‘You can’t win because of political voting.’ I didn’t understand

WINNERS 1981: BUCKS FIZZ

'YOU NEED THE "RIP OFF SKIRT" MOMENT...'

Bucks Fizz won Eurovision for the UK in 1981 with Making Your Mind Up. Cheryl Baker and Jay Aston recall the night – and the routine that changed their lives for ever

How did you and the band become part of Eurovision history?

CHERYL Bucks Fizz was the brainchild of Nicola Martin. Her boyfriend Andy Hill wrote Making Your Mind Up and it was put forward for Song for Europe in late 1980. When she discovered it had been accepted, she had to put a group together asap. Mike Nolan was a friend of hers, Jay Aston came via a dance agency, and Bobby Gee through an advert in The Stage. Bucks Fizz was Nicola’s favourite drink, which is why we were so named!

How did you feel about your chances going into the competition?

JAY I knew the song was very catchy and of course we had the skirt-ripping selling point up our sleeves. I think we were

VIEWPOINT

THIS IS CULTURAL HISTORY

Don't underestimate the power of Eurovision – it really matters, says Paddy O'Connell

TERRY WOGAN'S TAXI sped through the streets towards Eurovision and a perilous pothole. Ken Bruce and I offered the driver advice from the back seat. Back then, Ken ran a small stable of double-decker buses – the original London Routemasters. "You'll have seen that large hole there, driver?" he offered helpfully.

"The one signposted 'Australia!'" added Terry. We swerved towards a fruit stall as shoppers on the streets of Istanbul scattered all around. "Ah yes," chuckled Wogan, "I remember the police escort in Dublin in 1981. We could have used it again here."

Sharing a Eurovision taxi with Terry and Ken was a dream come true. But I detected even then, in 2004, that Wogan was falling out of love with his beloved song contest. Like millions of his devoted fans, he was increasingly nostalgic about Eurovision, feeling its best days lay behind, in the rear-view mirror.

THIS YEAR, MILLIONS will tune in for the 67th contest to see Liverpool fly the flag, not just for the UK but for Ukraine, too. Putin's war in Europe has left millions displaced and we are hosting for last year's winners. This is cultural history made live on TV and it's what this bonkers contest did for years in the darkest days of the Cold War: kept an innocent light shining simply by singing.

With this moment in May, I think the bad old days for the UK have gone. For 20 years we've done pretty dismally, blaming others for not voting for us. Famed for our love of music, we fell into a funk over this one night of the year. In truth it was never a fair verdict on what was going wrong. We simply needed to send a song that had got into people's ears across Europe ahead of the contest, and an artist who could charm our neighbours and sparkle on the TV screen.

Last year, Sam Ryder broke the spell hanging over the UK. By singing Space Man on a starry stage he wowed millions of young fans. But it wasn't just coming second in Italy with his final score of 466, it was his winning attitude. Sam told the press covering the event he wasn't there to worry about previous years when the UK did badly; he was in Turin for his song and the whole life-changing experience. And now, by the design of fate, he has brought the contest back to us.

I'm proud the UK is hosting, because we are famed for our pop and our sense of humour. Liverpool bristles with both, and famously the city is linked to many classic musical anthems. You'd need a heart of stone not to be moved as Ukrainians are shown what just one of them means... You'll Never Walk Alone.

I don't want critics of Eurovision to vanish, but I do hope they can whistle a different tune when the wind changes, too. If the world sees us host this year from a cheerful, confident and cheeky place, that's a great win for us long before Mae Muller belts out this year's entry, I Wrote a Song.

'Millions will see us fly the flag for Ukraine'

Even the King visited Liverpool and told her he would be egging her on come 13 May, just a week after he himself is crowned. The BBC will screen the coronation and Eurovision just days apart. Perhaps like that fabulous feeling in 2012 known as the Jubilympics, millions of us will get caught up in something else... call it Coro-vision.

I imagine even Terry would have got behind that. Now we have another glorious Irishman on the perch, and I bet Graham Norton could agree, when it comes to Eurovision, there are always unexpected turns in the road... Remember those potholes!

Paddy O'Connell is presenting the Eurovision Song Contest semi-finals on Radio 2 at 8pm on Tuesday 9 and Thursday 11 May. The final, hosted by Scott Mills and Rylan, is also on Radio 2 on Saturday from 8pm.

inoffensive enough that we picked up points from every country. Even today that silly song has some magical quality that puts a smile on people's faces. On the night there was a little spark, and despite our nerves, the song and our performance shone through.

What are your strongest memories of that night?

CHERYL Mike, Jay and I were so nervous, the only one keeping his cool was Bobby. I sang the first verse looking like a frightened rabbit, then Mike, totally going off-piste, looked at me and said, "Here we go!" It put my mind at rest immediately and I enjoyed the performance from then on. To this day, every time we get to that part of Making Your Mind Up, Mike looks at me and says, "Here we go!"

How did Eurovision change things for you?

JAY That three-minute performance really changed all our lives. For the following years our feet never touched the ground. It was cities, limos, hotels, airports, TV shows every day. I often wonder if we hadn't had that success what we'd all be doing now.

What is the magic ingredient of a winning song?

CHERYL You need a good song to start with, but it's the additional stuff that makes the difference: the dance routine, the eye-catching outfits, the special effects. You need the "rip off skirt" moment that makes the rest of Europe want to see and hear your song again. CF

MALNUTRITION APPEAL

TREATING MALNUTRITION IS ABOUT MORE THAN FOOD. IT'S ABOUT MEDICAL CARE.

An MSF nurse helps a mother feed her four-month-old malnourished child in Madarounfa clinic, Niger. Photograph © Oliver Barth/MSF

DR JENNA BROOME IS A DOCTOR
RECENTLY RETURNED FROM ETHIOPIA

“The malnutrition crisis in Ethiopia is the worst I’ve ever seen. You walk into our feeding centres and there are malnourished children everywhere. All our beds are full, family members are sleeping on the floors, mattresses line the corridors and, every day, more desperately ill people arrive. We just can’t turn anybody away.

People walk for miles to get to us, carrying their children. We see kids brought in who are really sick, almost at the point where they won’t survive. But with just a little bit of care and some focused treatment, we see them turn around. We give them antibiotics, oxygen and blood transfusions and, once they are stabilised, start them on therapeutic food and they begin to get better. You see their personalities come back, they start to smile, they come alive again.

It’s the best feeling in the world witnessing something like that, watching kids who could barely lift their heads a few weeks earlier running and playing. It’s so moving to see parents having their little ones restored to them.

Malnutrition isn’t just hunger. These children have an inability to fight off infectious disease because their immune systems have been so compromised that they need a whole range of medical care.

But one thing I’ve learned working for MSF is that it doesn’t take that much to combat malnutrition. With the right treatment and care, kids can really bounce back. You don’t need a lot of fancy kit. You need antibiotics, vaccinations, basic medical equipment, therapeutic food, and doctors and nurses who can do the work. You can do an awful lot with very little.

It’s completely unacceptable that children are still dying of starvation in 2023 when it’s so treatable and preventable. And it’s not just in Ethiopia. In Nigeria, in South Sudan, in Somalia, MSF teams are treating men, women and children caught up in this ongoing malnutrition crisis.

If MSF wasn’t there, many of these children would die. We need your support to keep reaching and treating people affected by this malnutrition crisis. We can’t do it without you.”

MALNUTRITION EMERGENCY

Conflict, poor weather conditions and price rises are driving a deadly spike in malnutrition in many parts of the world. Children under five are most at risk. In Niger, Ethiopia, Nigeria, Somalia and South Sudan, MSF is operating specialised inpatient feeding centres and is providing critical care to paediatric patients with severe medical complications. Treating malnutrition with food is not enough. Young children with severe malnutrition can become extremely vulnerable to conditions they’d otherwise recover from. We need your support to provide the lifesaving medical care these children desperately need.

£41 could pay for a blood pressure monitor to help detect underlying health issues

£447 can provide a month of lifesaving therapeutic food to treat 24 severely malnourished children

£194 could pay for a sustenance kit to help mothers provide babies with essential nutrition

FA CUP FINAL

THE OTHER REDS GO FOR GLORY

There's a new football force at Manchester United and it's female, says Simon Barnes

MANCHESTER UNITED ARE in their usual position of plucky underdogs, for they are, as you'll know, a club without much history and with very limited experience of big-time football and winning major trophies. But they have, at last, a chance of winning some serious silverware as they take on Chelsea in the FA Cup final at Wembley.

This is the women's game I'm talking about, of course, and though it's a big occasion for both clubs, it could be a defining one for Manchester United. After all, they have only been going for five years, and they have been off the pace for the first four of them.

Those who love Manchester United most will be unsurprised that it all goes back to the Glazers, the family who have owned the club for the past 18 years and done very nicely, thank you, even when the club hasn't. In their early days, paterfamilias Malcolm Glazer decided that this new-fangled notion of a women's football team wasn't part of their "core business".

'There's a real chance of winning the league and Cup double'

He meant "not obviously profitable". Had he had the good sense to ring me up before making that decision, I would have told him, "Malc, in ten years' time any big club without a successful women's side is going to look totally out of date, an enemy to progressive thought and, what's worse, silly."

The Glazers finally realised this in 2018, when Manchester United launched a belated bid for glory in the women's game. They won promotion from the Championship to the 12-team Women's Super League in 2019 at the first attempt and have kept their place ever since.

And now they're looking like a proper team, with a real chance of winning the league title and FA Cup double. A glorious future lies ahead – but perhaps only if they can hold on to striker

SENSATIONAL

Manchester United may be the WSL newcomers, but they have a top trump in striker Alessia Russo

Alessia Russo, whom you may remember from last year's European Championships. She scored four goals for England, all as a substitute, the last of them a sensational back-heel through the keeper's legs that won Goal of the Tournament.

If all goes well with injuries, Russo will be leading the line for United, while Chelsea have the great Australian forward Sam Kerr, who has the distinction of winning the Golden Boot in three different leagues on three different continents – and scoring the winning goals in the 2021 and 2022 FA Cup finals. Look out for her trademark back-flip celebration if she gets another on Sunday.

MANCHESTER UNITED ARE coached by Marc Skinner and have become a serious proposition this season, with a recent win over Arsenal and a comeback against Aston Villa showing that they have a knack for winning games that last season they would probably have lost. Russo has been a crucial part of all this. She scored United's first top-flight hat-trick – against Leicester City in March – and as good strikers do, gives a swagger and confidence to the whole team.

There is scarcely a side in the world that wouldn't be improved by Russo.

FA CUP WINNER
Chelsea's Sam Kerr has plenty of experience

Arsenal know this very well: in the January transfer window they made two unsuccessful world-record bids for her. Russo is out of contract at the end of the season and seems in no itchin' hurry to sign for United again. If she wants all the glory she can get, that means not only playing in the Champions League (the WSL's top three clubs go through), but playing in a team with serious expectations of winning it. Three of her England teammates now play in mainland Europe.

Manchester United's continued progress depends on keeping Russo, but it's possible Russo's own progress depends on leaving. However, if United manage to hold on to their right back, Ona Batlle of Spain, another top player soon out of contract, then staying put may in the end prove best.

But first things first: wrap up the league and contest the final. Chelsea have the confidence that comes from long-term success – this is their seventh League Cup or FA Cup final in nine years – but United have the audacity of the newcomer. And they also have Russo. For now.

The magic of your metabolism

Revitalise it, lose weight* and support energy levels with Germany's No.1 evidence-based meal replacement

David McCarthy

Professor Emeritus Nutrition and Health, London Metropolitan University

You've probably heard at one time or another someone say, "I have a slow metabolism and that's why I seem to gain weight". You may have even thought that it applied to you. Establishing whether this is true and if so, finding ways to boost it and thereby burn more calories, certainly appears to be a worthwhile exercise.

Metabolism is the process by which our body converts food into essential energy we need to do anything from breathing, moving, to the renewal and maintenance of all our cells. As much as metabolism is linked to weight, nutritional intake also plays a fundamental role in this process. Given these influencing factors on body weight, the question posed is whether we can consume the very best nutrition which optimises our metabolism for the benefit our overall health, wellbeing, and physical form? The answer can be found in Almased®.

The secret is in the science

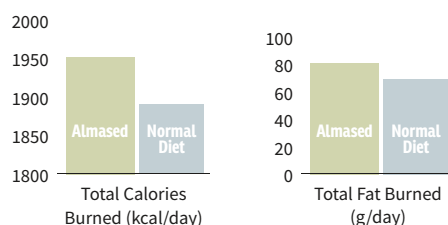

With more than 30 years of clinical research, renowned global scientists and medical journals have showcased the benefits of Almased® for weight loss and lasting weight maintenance. Ground-breaking clinical testing has found that even when compared to a low-fat, reduced-calorie diet, people who used Almased® achieved greater reduction in body weight, body fat and unhealthy abdominal fat, all while positively retaining essential muscle², without feeling hungry.

So unique is the product, the very latest clinical testing from North America has shown that when compared to a normal 2,000 calorie diet, healthy women who consumed Almased® burned a greater number of calories and most significantly, a greater amount of fat³ – all the result of superior improvements to the functioning of the body's metabolism⁴.

Experience the Almased® effect

Over a 32-hour period, nineteen healthy women had their calorie intake and calorie output measured in a state-of-the-art energy expenditure chamber (An Almased®-only diet was compared to a normal 2,000 calorie diet). The results were truly remarkable.

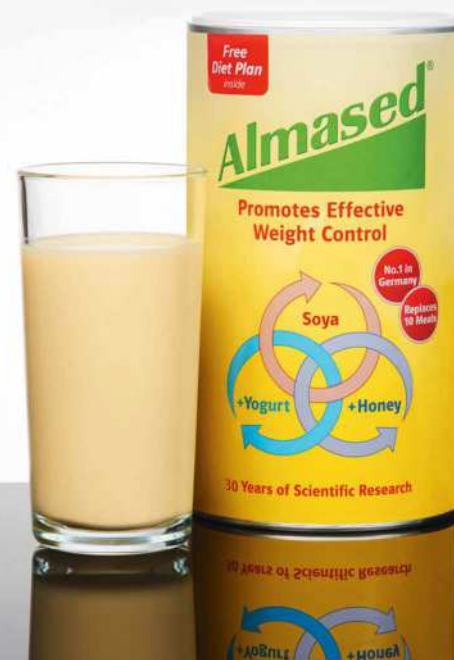

Consuming Almased® resulted in...

More calories burned

Increased fat burning

Negative fat balance: more fat was lost than consumed.

These first of their kind findings, confirm how consuming Almased® as a meal replacement results in greater daily calorie expenditure and greater fat burning when compared to a normal diet, thus playing a hugely significant role in successful weight loss for anyone taking Almased® in their daily diet. Professor David McCarthy explains that results such as these further underscore Almased®'s global reputation and position as Germany's No.1 meal replacement for weight loss and long-term weight maintenance without the dreaded yo-yo effect.

How Almased® benefits you

Anger and betrayal were felt when Rolf Harris's crimes were exposed. As a nation of viewers, we'd been duped, our memories of childhood warped by what had been revealed. But this analysis reminds us of the damage done to his victims during their formative years – as well as the lack of remorse shown by Harris. It's the story of fame, money and power allowing one man to pass off abuse as eccentric behaviour, even when his crimes were being committed in public view. Prepare to be outraged all over again. DAVID BROWN

CRIME DRAMA

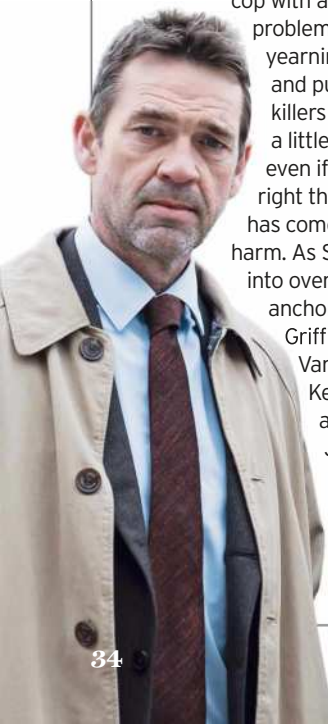

Crime

All 12 episodes available from 11 May

Co-created by Irvine Welsh and based on his 2008 novel, this drama – first shown on BritBox in 2021 – tries hard to refresh the subsection of detective shows where an agonised hero glimpses the evil lurking within us all. Dougray Scott is Ray Lennox (below), an Edinburgh cop with addiction problems and a yearning to catch and punish child killers that he feels a little too keenly... even if he may be right that a schoolgirl has come to terrible harm. As Scott goes into overdrive, he is anchored by Angela Griffin, Joanna Vanderham, Ken Stott and Guilt's Jamie Sives in the strong supporting cast.

Anthony Horowitz knows the rules of the whodunnit better than most, and in this lovely Russian doll of a mystery he pulls those elements inside out to deliver a cracking story. Two, in fact. The first is set in the present as editor Susan Ryeland (Lesley Manville) reads the latest typescript by author Alan Conway. But then, Conway's tale – a 1950s-set story featuring his sleuth Atticus Pünd (Tim McMullan) – is brought to life. As both narratives start to merge, Pünd makes his presence felt in Susan's life... DB

JOE LYCETT

"I'm currently two episodes in to the comedy Big Boys," says the comedian and presenter. "I laughed out loud at the first episode, which is a good sign. The writer, Jack Rooke, is a really clever egg. I'm also making my way through The Last of Us [Sky Go/Now], which I'm really enjoying, and I loved This Is Going to Hurt [iPlayer]. I thought that was really powerful television."

Available from 11 May

Though it has no David Bowie music (the estate declined), this is a vastly entertaining study of the starman in the making. Set in 1971 during Bowie's first tour of the US, the film depicts him as petty but also comically self-sabotaging, so you can't help but warm to him. Johnny Flynn isn't androgynous enough as Bowie, but the film looks authentic otherwise and Marc Maron puts in a fabulous turn as Bowie's fanboy publicist. STEVE MORRISSEY

Ben Affleck directs and co-stars in this infectious 1980s-set tale of how underperforming sports clothing brand Nike turned their fortunes around by luring basketball star Michael Jordan to endorse their trainers. Affleck plays Phil Knight, Nike's Porsche-driving CEO, but the film belongs to Matt Damon as Sonny Vaccaro, the basketball guru who spots Jordan's potential and sets out to reel him in with the creation of the Air Jordan trainer. The soundtrack of wall-to-wall hits (Dire Straits, Run-DMC, ZZ Top) lays on the period nostalgia thickly. Underneath that, though, Air is an absorbing film about money, power, race and class. JAMES MOTTRAM

Eurovision Song Contest: the Story of Fire Saga ★★★★★ 12

Available now

As we gear up for Eurovision, get in the spirit with this exuberant musical comedy. Will Ferrell and Rachel McAdams are no-hoper Icelandic duo Fire Saga, who fluke their way into representing their nation at the contest after a tragedy. Ferrell's pratfalls are huge fun, but Dan Stevens's smarmy Russian rival bags the biggest laughs, while a mocking affection for the contest's camp excess runs through the romp. JAMIE HEALY

SHARON HORGAN

"I'm watching Good Girls," says the actor/writer/producer. "My kids were watching it and I'm kind of glad I hadn't seen it before, because it has shades of Bad Sisters [Horgan's Bafta-nominated Apple TV+ series]. It's more of a sort of Breaking Bad-type thing with these three women who get caught up in criminal activity. I'm really enjoying it."

A screwball comedy of the old school, director Lina Roessler's feature debut is a fine showcase for the comic timing of Aubrey Plaza and Michael Caine. Plaza plays the owner of a publishing company whose salvation depends on a reclusive writer (Caine) she thought was dead. Not only is the sourpuss very much alive, but he owes her a novel and is contractually obliged to hit the book-signing trail to promote it. An odd-couple road movie is the result, with the leads skilfully playing off each other. STEVE MORRISSEY

REALITY

The Family Stallone

Episodes 1 and 2 available Thursday

The Kardashians are a hard act to follow, but Sylvester Stallone and his family here valiantly attempt to make a reality documentary as vapid as Kim and co's. We join them as Sly returns from six months away shooting Tulsa King and reunites with his wife Jennifer and daughters Sophia, Sistine and Scarlet. The opening episode features a lot of unlikely claims about how overbearing Stallone has been as a father and a tedious birthday dinner, but the main man's sense of humour makes it watchable. JACK SEALE

No Escape

All seven episodes available Thursday

Young British women losing their way while travelling in south-east Asia and ending up in trouble: it's a story told in countless tabloid newspaper articles and airport novels. This drama, based on the book by Lucy Clarke, stars Abigail Lawrie and The Outlaws' Rhianne Barreto as Lana and Kitty, who have to leave the UK in a hurry and wind up off the coast of the Philippines on a yacht crewed by cool young misfits. This potboiler thriller moves a little slowly and awkwardly at times, but there's plenty of incident. JS

ROMANTIC COMEDY

What's Love Got to Do with It? ★★★

Available 12 May

In this watchable romcom, documentary-maker Zoe (Lily James) is astonished to learn that childhood friend Kaz (Shazad Latif) has agreed to an assisted marriage. She asks Kaz's permission to film him on his journey and discovers it's a more complex issue than she had assumed. Much of the culture-clash comedy is too broad, especially that provided by Emma Thompson (above left, with James) as Zoe's mother, but the two leads share an easy chemistry. PATRICK CREMONA

Female film-makers from around the world provide seven short films for this project. The stories include Jennifer Hudson delivering a searing performance as a jailed drug addict, Marcia Gay Harden as a doctor working during the Covid-19 pandemic, and Eva Longoria (above) as a childless woman faced with a new family member. While some of the shorts are better than others, director Mipo Oh soars with her sweet tale of a Japanese mum (Anne Watanabe) and her chaotic home. JAYNE NELSON

LIVE

The UK hosting Eurovision for the first time in 25 years is as thrilling as it is bittersweet. With all the hubbub, it could be easy to forget the poignancy as to why last year's winners are unable to preside. There will be some nice nods to Ukraine tonight, though. Reigning champs Kalush Orchestra return with their song Stefania, some past Ukrainian contestants are performing, while Ukrainian singer/songwriter Julia Sanina will be one of tonight's hosts, joining Alesha Dixon, Ted Lasso actor Hannah Waddingham and Graham Norton. That means, sadly, we won't have the pleasure of Norton's gently acerbic take for the entire night. He'll be splitting commentating duties with Mel Giedroyc.

At the time of writing, the favourite is Sweden's Loreen (who won Eurovision in 2012). But maybe the song won't matter at all, and political voting (a phrase that has taken on an entirely new meaning since last year) will once again dominate.

After that he gets on board for a Canadian odyssey to travel from Montreal to Vancouver, via Ottawa, Ontario and Alaska.

Always prepared to have a go, Portillo has an exhilarating turn on an Olympic bobsleigh run, gets a soaking on a white-knuckle boat ride and – never one to shy from dressing up – pops on a kilt to attempt to toss the caber. JANE RACKHAM

Falklands War: the Untold Story

7.30pm C4

Catch up via Channel 4 streaming

More than 40 years on, enough time has elapsed for some plain speaking. "We very nearly lost the war because of extraordinarily bad decisions," says an SAS colonel. "It was all a lash-up," says a brigadier.

In this doc, first shown last year, veterans recount the catalogue of errors in the fight to regain the Falklands from Argentinian forces in 1982, and the word "shambles" doesn't seem too strong. There's moving tragedy in the story but gallows humour, too. Film-maker Harvey Lilley has put together a powerful testament to the lives lost as well as what feels like a manual on how not to run a war. DAVID BUTCHER

SITCOM

Dad's Army

7.35pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

These days, fans can dip into their DVDs or get a fix of Home Guard hilarity on streaming. But there's still something special about an airing on BBC primetime – especially when it's the very first episode. The Man and the Hour is the one and only time Dad's Army was set, briefly, in the present day (or rather, 1968, when it was first transmitted). "Alderman" George Mainwaring is the guest of honour at Walmington's "I'm Backing Britain" campaign launch, where he addresses older versions of his former platoon members.

Then we hurtle back to the war years – and the series we know and love. It's a superb scene-setter, raring to burst out of the blocks and full of rousing speeches. MARK BRAXTON

Fast & Furious: Greatest Moments Refuelled

8pm Sky Max Catch up Sky Go/Now

As new movie Fast X crash-bang-wallops sideways into cinemas, this countdown show uses viewer votes to rank the franchise's most incredible scenes. Having evolved from the street racing of the original Fast and the Furious to the spectacular stunts of the later films' global crime capers, F&F has plenty of standout moments for its fans to choose from: you can expect to see cars driven in mid-air, off cliffs, through bank vaults and from the top of one skyscraper to another, not to mention being chased by trains, tankers and even a submarine.

Stars of the series and celebrity admirers pick out some of their favourites, too. You might want to pair this, like beer and nuts, with Amazon Freevee's amiable behind-the-scenes doc Icons Unearthed: Fast & Furious. JACK SEALE

FILM OF THE DAY

Jurassic World: Fallen Kingdom

★★★ 8.00-10.20pm ITV1 12

ADVENTURE If 2015's Jurassic World took the original Jurassic Park concept to its logical theme-park conclusion, then this follow-up is something of a cousin to its darker 1997 sequel The Lost World, with a similar save-the-dinos plot. There's plenty to enjoy, including likeable leads Chris Pratt and Bryce Dallas Howard, a creepy new dinosaur (the Indoraptor), and an ending that upends the rules of the franchise. But no matter how well it's put together, it does just feel like a stepping stone towards last year's Dominion, now showing on Sky Cinema. HUW FULLERTON (US/Sp 2018, violence, HD)

Born in China

★★★ 10.00-11.15am BBC2 U

DOCUMENTARY This good-looking Disney production explores China's diverse landscape through five species that call it home. The focus is on entertainment more than education, but the cute factor goes through the roof every time the mother panda and her tumbling tot take to the screen. JAMIE HEALY (UK/Chi/US 2016, HD)

Summer Holiday

★★★ 1.00-2.45pm BBC2 U

See review, p95. (UK 1962, HD)

The Croods

★★★ 3.10-5.10pm ITV2 U

COMEDY From the people that brought you Madagascar, this lively cartoon has Nicolas Cage and Emma Stone voicing the dad and daughter of a not-so-modern Stone Age family who flee impending apocalypse with a more evolved teen (Ryan Reynolds) from another tribe. There's enough prehistorical slapstick to keep the kids entertained and adults amused. DAVE ALDRIDGE (US 2013, HD)

Peter Pan

★★★ 4.00-6.05pm ITV1 PG

FANTASY In this spirited take on JM Barrie's children's masterpiece, Peter (Jeremy Sumpter) and Wendy (Rachel Hurd-Wood) trifle with each other's hearts as they tussle with Captain Hook (Jason Isaacs). Australian director/screenwriter PJ Hogan gives the tale an eye-catching makeover, while retaining the Britishness of the source text. TOM HUTCHINSON (US/UK/Aus 2003, may be edited for violence, HD)

Far from the Madding Crowd

★★★ 8.05-10.00pm BBC2 12

ROMANCE Another Round's Thomas Vinterberg directs this spirited Thomas Hardy adaptation. Carey Mulligan plays Bathsheba, who attracts the attention of landowner William Boldwood (Michael Sheen), employee Gabriel Oak (Matthias Schoenaerts) and Sergeant Troy (Tom Sturridge). The cast is wonderful and the cinematography utterly ravishing. EMMA SIMMONDS (US/UK 2015, some violence, HD)

Jack Reacher: Never Go Back

★★★ 9.00-11.20pm C4 12

THRILLER Tom Cruise returns as the ex-military-cop hero in this decent sequel. This time, Reacher is forced to turn fugitive after being accused of murder, and goes on the run with Major Turner (Cobie Smulders). Cruise handles the slickly staged action with aplomb, with the threat of romance never once slowing him down.

STELLA PAPAMICHAEL
(US 2016, violence, HD)

Fast & Furious 7

★★★★ 9.00-11.45pm ITV2 12

ACTION Former assassin Jason Statham plots revenge on Vin Diesel and his crew in this globe-trotting entry in the series. Among the incredible action scenes are cars being dropped by parachute from a transport plane and a jump between the Etihad Towers in Abu Dhabi. The latest in the series, Fast X, hits cinemas on Friday. ALAN JONES
(US 2015, violence, swearing, HD)

The Magnificent Seven

★★★ 10.25pm-1.00am C5 12

WESTERN Director Antoine Fuqua gives John Sturges's classic an action injection for the 21st century. The premise remains much the same, as seven hombres come to the aid of a town bothered by bad guys. The eye-catching cast includes Denzel Washington as a US Marshal, Chris Pratt as a gambler and Ethan Hawke as a sharpshooter. JEREMY ASPINALL (US 2016, violence, HD)

Absolutely Fabulous: the Movie

★★★ 12.20-1.45am BBC1 (not in Scotland) 15

COMEDY In this frantic big-screen take on the beloved TV sitcom, Jennifer Saunders and Joanna Lumley's socialites Eddy and Patsy head for a life on the French Riviera after an incident involving Kate Moss. A mix of familiar faces (Julia Sawalha, June Whitfield) and cameoing celebrities (Joan Collins, Jon Hamm) join in the fun. VICTORIA LUXFORD

A NEW LIFE DOWN UNDER

From left: Finn Treacy, Rob Collins, Hattie Hook, Faye Marsay, Michelle Keegan and Warren Brown

DRAMA

Ten Pound Poms 9.00pm BBC1 Full series available on iPlayer from today

NEW SERIES An emigration advert in a 1950s newspaper promises sun and a fresh start in Australia for a tenner. Sounds too good to be true? Well, obviously. Because if this was the idyll it appeared to be, there wouldn't be enough tension to fill an hour of TV, let alone a six-part primetime series.

So, sure enough, when those who have made the lengthy crossing arrive at their new home, they discover the whitewashed houses on the printed page look more like prisoner-of-war camps. And builder Terry (Warren Brown) knows of what he speaks, as he was held captive in Dresden during the Second World War and twice tried to escape.

His story, along with that of fellow arrival Kate (Michelle Keegan), provides the focus of the opening hour of writer Danny Brocklehurst's immediately likeable Brits-in-a-foreign-land drama, which finds inspiration in a real-life migration scheme from the period and bounds along with the pace of a kangaroo in the bush. DAVID BROWN

Women's FA Cup Final

Catch up via iPlayer

Chelsea v Manchester United

The two teams who have spent the latter part of the season jostling for top spot in the Women's Super League head to Wembley for a showpiece blues-versus-reds final.

As winners of the last two FA Cup finals, not to mention twice beating Manchester United in the league this season, Chelsea will go into the match full of self-belief. That said, the Reds have become better and better as the season has progressed and will fancy their chances of winning the tournament for the first time. And who would bet against Lionesses striker Alessia Russo scoring for United at Wembley?

Challenge Annika: Dementia Special

7.30pm Channel 5 Catch up via My5

We're well used to seeing Annika Rice coming to the aid of those in need. For a while there, though, it looked as if she was the one wanting rescuing. A mere fortnight into the revival of her Challenge series, it was dumped from Saturday nights and replaced with one of those tittle-tattle royal docs that seem to be on a constantly running production line.

Well, now we finally get to see what went missing, as she returns in what must be said is a better timeslot, as there is something inherently Sunday-evening-ish about the sight of her interacting with those who will benefit from the dementia village she's building for Age UK in the Wirral. Expect plenty of hard hats and empathetic chats. DB

The Tragedy of Macbeth

8.00pm BBC4 Catch up via iPlayer

A morality tale for all times, Macbeth's capacity to reinvent itself remains undimmed. Here, in a performance taken from a 2021 run at London's Almeida Theatre and set in what feels like the present day, South African director Yaël Farber adds an on-stage cellist and envelops actors James McArdle and Saoirse Ronan (playing the weak-willed but capricious Macbeth and his initially ruthless wife, respectively) in brooding, sepulchral gloom.

We know how it ends, of course, but for all that Ronan looks a little young, the couple's descent into madness is paced like a psychological thriller – and when Banquo's ghost appears, McArdle (demented) and Ronan (bewildered and terrified) take your breath away. JOHN AIZLEWOOD

Malpractice

9.00pm ITV1

Full series available now via ITVX

Each episode of Malpractice finds a fresh way of whittling the will of Lucinda (Niamh Algar) even further. Yes, some of those problems may be of her own making, but there is, we sense, some grandmaster out there scheming to distance her from colleagues, family and career. And I suspect this goes much higher than Rob the GP (Douglas Henshall), who remains a mess of gauzes and tubes in intensive care.

I have a hunch that Dr Leo Harris is going to turn out to be pivotal to the plot – after all, you don't book an actor with the profile of James Purefoy and have him appear in so few scenes. Next week, in the series finale, we will discover whether I was right to go with my gut. DB

A sporting special of the comedy game show that traditionally marks the end of a calendar year. Jimmy Carr once again poses the questions, demanding answers to pub-quiz-style teasers with help from celebrity question-setters including Charles Dance and those unlikely series regulars, the kids from the Mitchell Brook Primary School.

Racking their brains as contestants are a phalanx of comedians who may well turn out to surprise us but do in some cases feel as if they might have been picked for their lack of sporting knowledge: Roisin Conaty, Judi Love, Joel Dommett, Dane Baptiste, Kerry Godliman and Tom Allen.

I Kissed a Boy

9.00pm BBC3 Episodes 1 and 2 available on iPlayer today

NEW SERIES

Bewilderingly, there has never been a gay dating show in the UK before, but that's set to change with this new show in which Dannii Minogue welcomes ten singletons to an Italian villa in the hope of meeting the man of their dreams.

In a cringe-inducing twist, having been matched up, the couples meet for the first time as they lock lips. Yes, really: no chat about the weather, just a full-on snog. It's then a case of getting to know each other before the dreaded Kiss-Off, where the person who isn't kissed must leave the villa. It's adolescent-nightmare territory, but thoroughly entertaining all the same. KAY RIBEIRO

In 1986, when Sweden's prime minister Olof Palme was assassinated in Stockholm, Jan Stocklassa was 21 years old and, like most people, believed the politician was shot by a lone gunman. Three decades later, his interest in the case was piqued when he stumbled upon files belonging to the author Stieg Larsson that suggested otherwise.

In this four-part series, Stocklassa hears testimony that appears to confirm Larsson's view that the investigation was bungled, as well as alarming evidence from a mercenary suggesting that the murder was politically motivated. JANE RACKHAM

Bafta Television Awards 2023 7.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

LIVE

If there's a drama, actor or documentary that feels like a dead cert at the Baftas, chances are it could walk away empty-handed. There was consternation last year when Russell T Davies's lauded Channel 4 series It's a Sin was nominated for the most awards with seven nods but didn't receive a single accolade on the night. It's decisions such as this which really put the "baffling" into Bafta.

Could this year's most-nominated series, the BBC1 police drama The Responder, suffer the same fate? And instead of tipping The White Lotus to win Best International Programme, might the niche French historical drama Oussekine be a safer bet? Who knows? The only certainty on the night is that Romesh Ranganathan and Rob Beckett are making their debut as hosts. FRANCES TAYLOR

FILM OF THE DAY

P The Mauritanian ★★★★★

10.00pm-12.05am BBC2

15

BIOPIC Kevin Macdonald's Bafta-nominated drama is a full-blooded adaptation of the memoir of Guantanamo detainee Mohamedou Ould Slahi. Tahar Rahim plays the Mauritanian engineer who was arrested in 2001, then held and tortured without charge until 2016. Jodie Foster is the defence attorney who takes on his case, and faces off with Benedict Cumberbatch's army prosecutor. Macdonald stages the torture scenes without apology, in a film that reminds us of the bad things that can happen behind closed doors. ANDREW COLLINS (UK/US 2020, violence, swearing, sexual references, HD)

COMEDY A charming paean to the value of being yourself, this animated film sees Ferdinand the bull flee a life of torment to find a happier home on a farm. WESTERN This may be another variation on Rio Bravo, but it's John Wayne's last movie with director Howard Hawks, and there's a wonderful sense of occasion to it all. Jorge Rivero and Bob's son, Chris Mitchum, play the Confederate looters snatching Union gold, and Wayne is the colonel trying to find the traitor feeding information to the robbers. TOM HUTCHINSON (US 1970, HD)

SPY The third James Bond movie is among the slickest of the entire franchise. ON THE CASE

Gareth John Bale, Philip Glenister and Steffan Rhodri play detectives revisiting past killings

DRAMA

Steeltown Murders 9.00pm BBC1 Full series available on iPlayer

NEW SERIES

Crime dramas currently seem to have this Tardis-like tendency to go zipping up and down the decades. First there was Karen Pirie, then came Magpie Murders and now this sombre, based-on-real-events police thriller also features a dual-timeframe device, being set in both 1973 and the early 2000s.

One period features nicotine-brown décor, the other boxy desktop computers, so it's easy to keep track. And this, as you'll see, is an all-important factor because straddling the two eras are the officers involved, most notably principled Paul Bethell, played with an unflattering 'tache in each instance by Scott Arthur and later in life by Philip Glenister.

Bethell gets the chance to re-open an investigation into a series of rapes and murders in the Port Talbot area, thanks to breakthroughs in DNA technology – and as old case files are dusted down, the clock ticks back to when the crimes were committed. An accompanying documentary, Steeltown Murders: Hunting a Serial Killer, is available on iPlayer following tonight's episode. DAVID BROWN

Sky Atlantic Catch up Sky Go/Now

I quite liked Shiv and Tom reunited but, boy, have they royally messed up! Of course, he still doesn't know she's pregnant, and Shiv is freaking out now she's nailed herself to "the Matsson cross" and learnt his company's numbers don't add up. Can she "build another India" as the Swede flipantly instructed? Kendall has promised, "We go 'reverse Viking'. We pillage their village." Let's see how that plays out.

There's no tempting the deluded Connor away from his presidential election campaign, and yet another occasion looms to bring all the principal characters handily into the same space – Logan's funeral. Roman will preside: "Nobody wanted it, so I got it." PATRICK MULKERN

TRAVEL

Clive Myrie's Italian Road Trip

6.30pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

The last thing you'd expect to see in a small Italian town is a bodega selling Scottish produce. But over half of the 10,000 residents of Barga, a picturesque medieval town in Tuscany, claim to have Scottish connections so a specialist shop makes sense. It gets even more surreally Celtic when, against a backdrop of Tuscany's rolling hills, Clive meets a piper in full Scottish regalia and then gets a fish supper.

Barga, Clive concludes, is a great example of how Italians embrace outsiders. It isn't all shortbread and kilts, though. He also heads into the countryside to chip off a piece of the red marbled quartz used in many of Florence's grander buildings.

University Challenge

8.30pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

Brace yourselves – it's semi-final time. Just two more episodes after tonight before Jeremy Paxman rides off into the sunset of retirement after 29 years as question master, the echoes of him bellowing "Come on!" fading slowly away as Amol Rajan prepares to take over for the next series.

But for now it's business as usual. The two teams in this first semi met in the protracted win-some-lose-some quarter-final stage, but don't take the result of that encounter as a guide to form for this clash. It's going to take fast buzzer fingers, obsessively detailed scientific and history knowledge, and a more than passing familiarity with films about cows for the winners to make it to the final. CERI THOMAS

DOCUMENTARY

The Stones and Brian Jones

9.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

Almost everyone interviewed in Nick Broomfield's engrossing portrait of the Rolling Stones' guitarist, who died in 1969, describes him as a well-spoken, sensitive gentleman. But he had a cruel side, too, could use people (estranged from his bourgeois parents, he often "adopted" families and on five occasions got the daughter pregnant before moving on), and was jealous of the song-writing talents of Mick and Keith.

They don't contribute to the film, although Bill Wyman does (and is clearly enthralled by Brian's musical talents), as do friends and girlfriends. What's so sad is seeing someone gradually being destroyed by lifelong low self-esteem, drugs and disastrous relationships. JR See feature: page 20

Rescue: Extreme Medics

9.00pm C4

Catch up via C4 streaming

When this medical documentary talks about "extreme" situations, it isn't kidding. The medics of the Scottish Trauma Network tackle severe injuries in the most remote places. And that's not an exaggeration: there's the crashed rally driver who needs to be helicoptered off the island of Mull, and the woman who's fallen 15 feet down a waterfall and requires the team to fly out and rescue her from a remote sea loch.

Stabilising the patients is just the beginning, though, as the cameras then follow them to the nearest trauma centre. It's enthralling, often moving stuff that doesn't let the beautiful aerial footage distract you from the issues at play. CT

Abandoned Engineering

9.00pm Yesterday

Catch up via UKTV Play

Up in the hills of Montserrat, in the Caribbean, is what looks like a decaying holiday villa. But in the 1980s, bands such as Dire Straits, the Police and the Rolling Stones all recorded there. AIR Studios was the brainchild of George Martin, who wanted his artists to be able to create music without big-city distractions. Sadly, it was destroyed in 1989, not by a petulant rock star but by Hurricane Hugo.

We also get a peek at the ruins of Finland's Salpa Line, constructed to defend the country against Soviet invasion, a dilapidated spa town in Georgia built on the orders of Josef Stalin and a once opulent theatre in Arkansas with links to racism. JR

ASTRONOMY

The Sky at Night

10.00pm BBC4 Catch up via iPlayer

As if we haven't already got enough on our plates worrying about artificial intelligence, pandemics and supervolcanos, this episode explores the existential threat posed by asteroids. Apparently, around 2,300 asteroids have been identified as "potentially hazardous", which is presumably a euphemism for "could deal more damage than a million hydrogen bombs".

Still, unlike the dinosaurs, we have science on our side. Maggie Aderin-Pocock and Chris Lintott meet the professors charged with monitoring these near-Earth nuisances. Could it really be possible to change an asteroid's course, as in the terrible film Armageddon? As unlikely as it sounds, it could be. GARY ROSE

Bereaved Stella (Vicky McClure) meets prisoner Charles (Johnny Harris)

DRAMA

Without Sin

9.00pm ITV1 Catch up via ITVX

NEW SERIES

Vicky McClure is brilliant in an extremely challenging role, in a series that balances tough character drama with a mystery thriller. Numbed by grief, Stella (McClure) is living a nocturnal half-life in the wake of her daughter's murder, and is persuaded to attend a meeting with the man convicted of the killing, Charles (Johnny Harris, who was McClure's co-star in This Is England '86), as part of a "restorative justice" scheme.

When the conversation doesn't go as anticipated – in a way that makes proceeding to episode two irresistible – she has to step even further away from the world she used to know. McClure ably navigates the anguish, resolve and hard-won wisdom of the lead character. This four-parter was first available on ITVX in December and the series now airs nightly until Thursday. JACK SEALE

Colette ★★★★★ 11.15pm-1.00am BBC2 15

PERIOD DRAMA Keira Knightley was born to play the feminist icon Sidonie-Gabrielle Colette and is in her element in director Wash Westmoreland's elegant and titillating account of a literary figure who became a sensation. The film focuses on Colette's marriage to Henry Gauthier-Villars (a priapic Dominic West), who published her racy stories under his name for reasons of patriarchal orthodoxy. All stiff collars, inky quills and heavy drapes, the film effortlessly conjures the Belle Epoque period, with the mainly British and Irish cast eschewing Allo, 'Allo French accents. ANDREW COLLINS (UK/US 2018, sex scenes, nudity, some swearing, HD)

The Spaniard's Curse ★★ 11.00am-12.35pm Talking Pictures TV U

MURDER MYSTERY When an innocent man is sentenced to be hanged for murder, he invokes an old Spanish curse on the judge, prosecuting counsel and jury. After deaths begin to occur, suspicion falls on the condemned man, only for his sudden demise to intensify the mystery. Among a solid cast, Michael Hordern gives the sharpest performance as the judge. ALLEN EYLES (UK 1958, BW)

Once upon a Texas Train ★★★★★ 3.40-5.35pm Great Action U

WESTERN Texas Ranger Richard Widmark and ageing outlaw Willie Nelson discover that upstart youngster Shaun Cassidy is about to disrupt their unlawful business by intercepting some ill-gotten loot. The light-hearted tone of this western might offend purists, but others will enjoy the rollicking entertainment. TS (US TVM 1988, some violence)

The Devil Wears Prada ★★★★★ 6.45-9.00pm Film4 PG

COMEDY DRAMA Meryl Streep is the boss from hell in this glossy fashion-industry satire. Streep steals every scene as the editor of New York style magazine Runway, who makes life a misery for naive new assistant Anne Hathaway. It's exuberantly played by one and all, but the comedy does lack that essential bite. SLOAN FREER (US 2006, edited for content, HD)

The Hanging Tree ★★★★★ 6.50-9.00pm TCM PG

WESTERN Set in and around a wild mining community, this film builds to an incredibly moving climax. Gary Cooper is magnificent as the doctor who cares for Maria Schell's temporarily blind immigrant. The lewd attentions of Karl Malden add spice to the scenario and George C Scott (in his screen debut) also makes an impact as a fanatical healer. AE (US 1959, HD)

Spider-Man 2 ★★★★★ 8.00-10.20pm Sky Showcase PG

ACTION Sam Raimi's superhero sequel sees the web-slinger (Tobey Maguire) struggling to cope with the responsibilities his powers bring, a task complicated by the appearance of villainous Doctor Octopus (Alfred Molina). This is still one of the most solid of the Spidey movies, brimming with wit, charm and imagination. SF (US 2004, violence, swearing, HD)

Strange Days ★★★★★

9.00-11.50pm

Talking Pictures TV 18

THRILLER Ralph Fiennes plays a dealer in virtual-reality clips in this dazzling sci-fi film. As New Year's Eve 1999 approaches, Fiennes tries to track down a killer recording his crimes for the ultimate "snuff" experience. Kathryn Bigelow directs with an exhilarating noir style and offers a darkly fascinating look at the moral implications of advanced technology. ALAN JONES (US 1995, violence, swearing, drug abuse, nudity)

Retreat ★★★★★

9.00-10.55pm Legend 15

THRILLER This moody, well-played British thriller boasts a credible apocalyptic premise. Cillian Murphy and Thandie Newton play a married couple who head to a remote island. But matters take an unnerving turn with the arrival of a mysterious soldier (Jamie Bell), who brings news from the outside world. Viewers should brace themselves for a grim and bloody climax. DAMON WISE (UK 2011, violence, swearing)

Miss Peregrine's Home for Peculiar Children ★★★★★

11.10pm-1.45am Film4 12

FANTASY Tim Burton's delirious gothic fairy tale is set in a Welsh island home for children cursed with special powers. Eva Green is great as the kids' carer, Miss Peregrine, with Asa Butterfield as a young new arrival. The rules of this strange universe are a tad convoluted, but Burton fans will feel spoiled by all the enchanting weirdness. STELLA PAPAMICHAEL (US 2016, violence, HD)

Forensics: the Real CSI

9.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

You need a strong disposition to get through this gruellingly detailed look into the work of forensic scientists, but it's riveting. The victim in the first case – a 21-year-old who was raped by a stranger in a derelict Birmingham house – gives a candid account of the assault to the police, before revealing that the attacker wore a condom and she showered afterwards (thus washing away his DNA). These details are important because, as the nurse at the Sexual Assault Referral Centre explains, "Our crime scene is the person." However, all is not lost.

The Perry Barr police quickly track down a suspect but it's the painstaking hunt for evidence that will conclusively link him to the crime that's so fascinating, albeit tense. We learn that fingerprints on a bank note don't last long, footage taken by smart doorbells can be crucial and that police use software to get into a locked mobile – plus how difficult it can be to prove whether a sexual act was consensual or not.

FOOD

MasterChef

9.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

No, your eyes aren't deceiving you. That's not Gregg Wallace standing next to John Torode in the MasterChef kitchen. He was unwell when this was filmed, so is tonight replaced by chef Anna Haugh (recently seen on MasterChef: the Professionals) and by Monica Galetti tomorrow. There may be less emphasis on puddings.

It's knock-out week so the remaining 14 cooks are divided into two groups. Each must cook a dish they'd have on the menu of their own restaurant or feature in their cookbook. Tonight's best five go to Decimo in London's King's Cross to prepare lunch under Peter Sanchez-Iglesias. The best five tomorrow work in the Royal Opera House under Richard Robinson. JANE RACKHAM

Miss Scarlet and the Duke

9.00pm Alibi
Catch up via Sky Go/Now

SERIES FINALE

When Eliza receives a parcel, her intrigue turns to horror on discovering that it's a bomb. Rival PI Patrick Nash, her accomplice Moses and the Duke received one too, but none is primed to explode. Why?

It's a neat way to unite the chief characters for an "Investigators Assemble" season finale. And the Duke's demotion by Detective Hudson (expertly irritating in the hands of Sam Hoare) brings him back into the professional and personal orbit of Eliza. This is a relief after episodes in which they've largely been kept apart, and a scene in which they pose as a couple is charmingly penned and played. It's tense, funny and very romantic. MARK BRAXTON

SITCOM

Colin from Accounts

10.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

Ashley is dreading her 30th birthday. But not due to worries about getting older or reaching a big milestone: it's because she has to spend an evening with her mum Lynelle and her partner Lee. So Ashley takes Gordon for moral support. "It'll be fine. Parents are my specialty," he shrugs. "Yeah," she retorts. "They won't be after tonight."

She's proved right, as all the worst possible passive aggressive (and downright disturbing, courtesy of Lee) dinner party situations manifest themselves. The tone slips arguably too far into dramedy territory, but special mention needs to go to the writers' brilliant Frankenstein-type invention of a "gooducken" roast. That's a chicken... in a duck... in a goose. FRANCES TAYLOR

Rebekah Vardy: Jehovah's Witnesses and Me

10.00pm C4
Catch up via C4 streaming

It's hard to keep the wife of footballer Jamie Vardy out of the headlines. If she's not losing libel trials or trademarking the phrase "Wagatha Christie", she's fronting primetime documentaries. Yet this raw film shows an unseen side to her.

Vardy was raised as a Jehovah's Witness and says the religion failed to support her through child sexual abuse. She was bullied at school and driven to the brink of suicide, but is now reckoning with her trauma at 41. She meets former members of the Jehovah's Witness community, and sees secret documents with insight into the organisation's inner workings. MICHAEL HOGAN

In the Name of the Father – Storyville

10.00pm BBC4 Catch up via iPlayer

An astonishing 300,000 people attended the 2015 funeral of Eliezer Shlomo Schick. Also known as Mohorosh, he was a prominent Brooklyn-based Rabbi who established Breslev City: a closed Hasidic community in Galilee. In life, many agreed he was a good, pious – albeit conservative – man. But in death, it transpired Schick was not what he seemed. This documentary paints a picture including underage marriage, sexual assault, rampant violence and financial skulduggery.

With the aid of Schick's son and archive footage from Breslev City itself, it's a sobering exposé of one who fooled almost all people almost all the time. JOHN AIZLEWOOD

DRAMA

Perry Mason

10.05pm Sky Atlantic
Catch up via Sky Go/Now

Perry proves himself to be as unconventional a father as he is a lawyer when son Teddy spends the night at his apartment. The attorney's opening argument? That the boy should ditch Latin homework and accompany him to the cinema to watch King Kong. And when Perry then takes Teddy to school on the back of his motorbike, eyebrows of both teachers and parents are raised.

On the professional front, there's more burnished wood and mournful sax as Brooks McCutcheon's wealthy competitors are investigated. Word gets back to the dead man's dad, who issues Perry with a warning that ought not to be ignored if he knows what's good for him. DAVID BROWN

ENTERTAINMENT

Jonathan Ross's Must-Watch Films

10.45pm (not Scotland) ITV1
Catch up via ITVX

A late-evening movie show hosted by Jonathan Ross? Quick, someone call the Noughties and tell them their TV schedule has turned up in 2023! OK, a cheap shot, I agree. Because Ross is always good value when it comes to his critiques, even when, as is the case here, he's merely promoting what's on the ITVX streaming service.

The focus tonight is on cult films, with Ross offering an eclectic mix including trippy war epic Apocalypse Now, dystopian actioner Escape from LA and the sexed-up noirish thriller Basic Instinct. There's no word yet as to whether Ross will be copying Sharon Stone's leg movements in the studio, though. DB

Waterloo Road

8.00pm BBC1 All episodes on iPlayer from today, plus series 1–11

New term, new knife checks. Following the surprise arrest at the climax of the previous series, this is perhaps understandable. But it doesn't do much to calm the students, who are seen chanting "Free Danny Lewis", while waiting to gain admittance to the building.

A second source of tension is the presence in the corridors of uniformed officers, as many pupils don't exactly view "the feds" as being on their side. Hence the school and police football match (notice the deliberate avoidance of the word "versus"), which the teaching staff hope can build trust. No such luck.

Off the pitch, we also get the return of Andrew Treneman (Jamie Glover), who's back in the series for the first time since 2009 to deepen the furrows on the brow of under-pressure headteacher Kim Campbell (Angela Griffin). DB

ACTION This adaptation of Alan Moore and Dave Gibbons's comic-book series offers a complex deconstruction of the superhero myth. Director Zack Snyder (Man of Steel) delivers a violent epic set in an alternative 1980s in which America was victorious in Vietnam, Nixon remains president and masked crime fighters have been outlawed. It's here that a brutal mystery man investigates a "mask" murder and unravels a conspiracy. Hyper-stylised visuals capture the noir-like seediness of Moore's world brilliantly.
JAMIE RUSSELL (US 2009, violence, swearing, sex scenes, nudity, HD)

The Stars Look Down ★★★★★

12.25-2.20pm PG

DRAMA Carol Reed directs this well-crafted adaptation of AJ Cronin's novel about life in an English mining town. Michael Redgrave plays the upwardly mobile son of a miner, with Margaret Lockwood as the woman he marries. The film is strong on detail in its portrayal of mining life and, although it creaks with age in parts, it remains powerful and moving.
PETER FREEDMAN (UK 1939, BW)

Vengeance Valley ★★★★★

5.00-6.45pm TCM PG

WESTERN Putting a Wild West spin on the story of Cain and Abel, this stars Burt Lancaster as a rancher's adopted son who always takes the rap for his brother, played by the snivelling, sneering Robert Walker. Matters come to a head when a woman becomes pregnant. It's a decent psychological western, nicely shot in the Rocky Mountains.
ADRIAN TURNER (US 1951, HD)

DRAMA In this underrated occult thriller, dying concert pianist Curt Jurgens uses black magic to possess journalist Alan Alda's body. When Alda's wife, Jacqueline Bisset, finds out what's going on, things start getting really scary. Director Paul Wendkos uses soap-opera clichés and dazzling visuals to distort reality and fantasy, creating an unnerving shocker. AJ (US 1971, violence, sex scenes)

Fighting Back ★★★★★

11.00pm-12.55am Legend 18

ACTION As Death Wish rip-offs go, Lewis Teague's film is close to the cream of the crop. Tom Skerritt is excellent as a Philadelphia shopkeeper who organises a vigilante group to crack down on local deviants. The pace is lively, but Teague tries to have his cake and eat it, denouncing violent retribution on the one hand while succumbing to crowd-pleasing mayhem on the other. ROBERT SELLERS (US 1982, violence, swearing)

Moonlight ★★★★★

11.15pm-1.00am BBC2 15

DRAMA This Oscar-winning film from writer/director Barry Jenkins lays bare the experience of growing up poor, black and gay in America. It charts the life of Chiron from an attention-starved child (played by Alex Hibbert), to a persecuted teen (Ashton Sanders) and finally a mistrustful adult (Trevante Rhodes). It's a film of rare empathy and beauty.

Matt Willis: Fighting Addiction

9.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

"I don't drink. I don't take drugs. But I'm not recovered," says Busted's Matt Willis. An addict who's been to rehab four times already, he knows he's only one drink or one sniff away from "going under again". He feels he hasn't resolved his problems and is constantly terrified of relapsing because he's aware of the destructive effect his addictions have had on his wife, TV presenter Emma Willis, and the other people he loves.

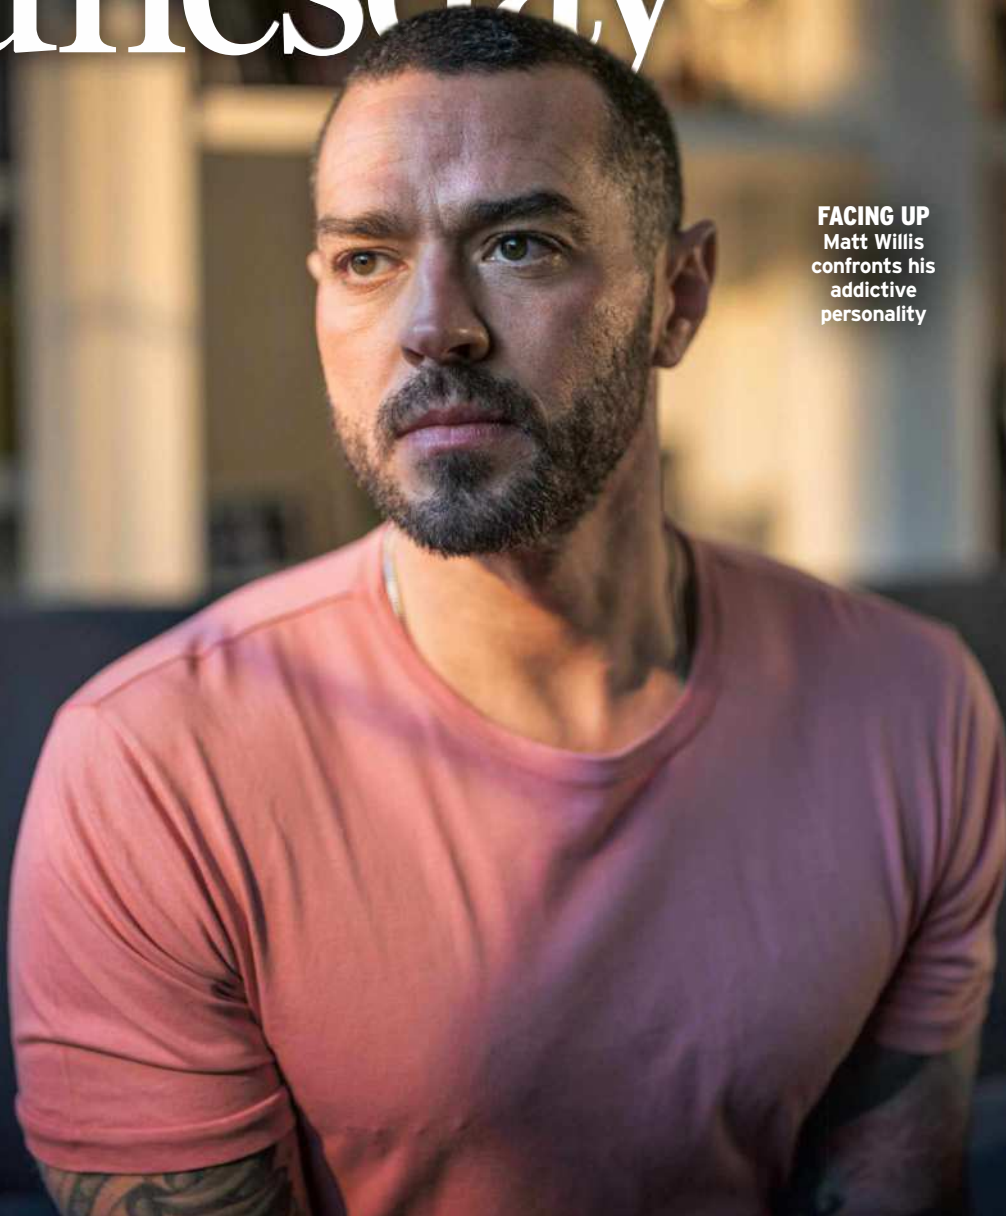

In this heartfelt and honest film, he tries to understand his addictive personality, while Emma attempts to work out why she never saw the signs when he was relapsing. He has always avoided therapy, maintaining that previously he simply told counsellors what they wanted to hear or avoided certain subjects. But he decides to try it again because Busted are about to go on tour – and that's when he's relapsed before.

It is, inevitably, a personal story but it has much to say to anyone struggling with addiction – as well as to those in a relationship with an addict. JANE RACKHAM

Designing the Hebrides

8.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

FINAL EPISODE When you live on an island like Mull, you never throw things away because they might come in handy at some point. So, challenged to make a gin and cheese tasting bar on Sgriob-Ruadh farm where he and partner Ro volunteered when they first arrived in the Hebrides, Banjo Beale salvages and upcycles all sorts of items. "I've been using so much old stuff from churches I'm probably going to hell!" he grimaces.

The last in the series is a very personal project for him because the farm owner, Chris, has done so much for them.

Once again, it's a heart-warming story of community and kindness as well as interior design. JR

Natural History Museum: World of Wonder

8.00pm Channel 5 Catch up via My5

"It's an absolute dream come true," trills Natural History Museum duty manager Hattie of her task – mundane perhaps to outsiders – to ensure the building's 1,400 doors are closed at the end of each day. Not all Hattie's 900 fellow workers may share her enthusiasm off camera, but she encapsulates the second instalment of this feel-good, behind-the-scenes look at a great British institution.

Elsewhere, there's the glitz of the Wildlife Photographer of the Year ceremony, but more gripping still is an extraordinarily detailed investigation into the sudden deaths of thousands of starfish 167 million years ago in Wiltshire. To learn more, each fossil is photographed up to 5,000 times. JOHN AIZLEWOOD

8.30pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

FINAL EPISODE What makes a house a home? It's something judges Owain Wyn Evans, interior designer Mandy Watkins and architectural designer Glen Thomas thrash out in the grand final as they re-examine all five regional winners. Does the minimalist home with stunning river views deserve the title? Should a revamped, stunningly individualistic Victorian terrace win for sheer homely feel? Or will one of the other three – perhaps the cottage near Kidwelly Castle – bag the award? And will the always spectacularly turned out Owain – clad this time in a sparkly black padded suit – have to exercise his casting vote? As they deliberate, the owners have an anxious wait... CERI THOMAS

11 Minutes: America's Deadliest Mass Shooting

9.00pm, 9.50pm BBC2
Catch up via iPlayer

NEW SERIES The first half of Jeff Zimbalist's four-part doc is a chilling immersion into events in Las Vegas in 2017, when a shooter opened fire on a music festival, killing dozens and injuring hundreds. Using first-person footage and recollections from attendees, performers and the emergency services, it is expertly structured for maximum tension, evoking the terror as the first shots were fired. It is also about the how as much as the what, where and why; although there is nothing so far on the wider implications, it cannot be anything other than another potent argument against second amendment rights. GABRIEL TATE

The second in this fascinating three-part series following youngsters in the care of Coventry Children's Services shifts the focus to teens Byron and Bayley, who are both set to leave the care system. Having turned 18, Byron leaves his foster home but struggles, losing his job and turning to drink and drugs. He's now in a hostel for young people at risk of homelessness, but can his former foster carers get him back on the right path?

Meanwhile, it's time Bayley tried to live independently as she approaches her 18th birthday. She temporarily swaps her care home for a training flat – but bored, lonely, and with no authority figures around, old bad behaviour patterns frustratingly rear their head. KAY RIBEIRO

Rookie Nurses

9pm, 9.30pm BBC3 Catch up: iPlayer

The most striking thing about this series is how enthusiastic the newly qualified nurses across Wales are. Straight from university, they are passionate and undaunted (for which, read: not yet jaded) by the conditions they are set to work under.

Highlights include notable character Mikey, 22, who is a breath of fresh air in A&E and makes his concussed patient laugh when he advises caution while accidentally bashing his own head. Also, gory-wound-loving Leah, 24, who bonds with an amputee who lost a big toe in a freak lawn mower accident and amusingly questions whether he'll leave an online review of the store where he bought it. KR

Jim is keen to spot the gannet, and visits Bempton Cliffs in East Yorkshire to do so. The UK's biggest seabirds gather here en masse – 30,000 in high season, and Jim emulates the male's "love gift" to his mate by donating Nancy a mouthful of grass.

While in Jim's home county, they also visit his mum Audrey for a few stories, and catch up with their friend Colin Self and his wife Jess. Pop artist Colin and Jim attempt a 30-minute landscape – Scarborough Harbour – though Colin runs out of time and has to present them with his finished work later via Zoom. His reaction to Nancy's question "Did you do that in half an hour?" really is a picture. MB

Victoria Wood Night

from 7.00pm BBC4 Catch up via iPlayer

It doesn't feel right that someone with such a gift for entertaining left us at just 62 – "Queen Vic", as headline writers liked to call her, would have been 70 this week. But as Wood herself reflected, life isn't fair: "Some of us drink champagne in the fast lane, and some of us eat our sandwiches by the loose chippings on the A597."

She was as admired by her peers as she was loved by the public – and that's clear from A Bafta Tribute at 7.55pm; the hard yards she put in while touring are evident in A Personal View at 12.35am; and the alchemy of her abiding partnership with Julie Walters seeps from their every scene together in Pat and Margaret, introduced by her "rep company" stalwart Duncan Preston at 10pm.

The filling in the Victoria sandwich is the comic's own Secret List of her favourite sketches (9pm and 11.35pm). Enjoy again her turned-on-a-lathe wordcraft and the way she found funny in every corner, from soaps and supermarkets to swimming the channel. And you can bet your Woman's Weekly on an appearance from Barry and Freda... MARK BRAXTON

FILM OF THE DAY

Easy A ★★ ★ ★ 10.00-11.30pm BBC3 15

COMEDY Emma Stone demonstrated her star charisma with this teen movie, playing a clean-living high-school girl whose fibs about her sexual exploits get her a lot of attention. And, of course, those tall tales only get her into deeper trouble. What unfolds is a deft, witty and sympathetic tale of adolescent confusion that references both Nathaniel Hawthorne's The Scarlet Letter and John Hughes teen pics of the 1980s – and gets away with it. Stanley Tucci and Patricia Clarkson are lots of fun as Stone's parents, while Malcolm McDowell and Lisa Kudrow play members of the school staff. TREVOR JOHNSTON (US 2010, swearing, sexual references, HD)

Footsteps in the Fog ★★ ★ 12.40-2.30pm Film4 U

THRILLER Jean Simmons and her then husband, Stewart Granger, returned to Britain at the peak of their Hollywood stardom for this effective Victorian melodrama. Granger plays the wife murderer whose plot to kill blackmailing Cockney maid Simmons backfires. Finlay Currie, Ronald Squire and Belinda Lee also feature among the fine cast. TONY SLOMAN (UK/US 1955, HD)

A Night in Casablanca

★★ ★ 3.00-4.45pm Talking Pictures TV U

COMEDY While it has none of the sustained genius of their earlier outings, this rarely shown Marx Brothers picture has enough moments of inspired lunacy to merit a place on most viewers' "must-see" lists. Groucho goes into one-liner overdrive as the manager of the Hotel Casablanca, but Harpo has the best gag as a valet. DAVID PARKINSON (US 1946, BW)

Star Trek ★★ ★ ★

6.35-9.00pm Film4 12

SCI-FI JJ Abrams's stylish franchise reboot is cleverly set before the original TV series, and sees a young James T Kirk (Chris Pine) reluctantly attend Starfleet

Only God Forgives

★★ ★ ★ 10.50pm-12.40am Great Movies 18

THRILLER Nicolas Winding Refn's follow-up to Drive is slow at times, and punctuated with graphic violence, but it will reward those who stay with its fractured storyline. Ryan Gosling plays a Bangkok drug dealer whose domineering mother (Kristin Scott Thomas) orders him to find and kill whoever recently murdered his psychotic brother. DW (Fr/Den 2012, violence, swearing, racist language, sex scenes)

Contraband ★★ ★

11.30pm-1.45am 5 Action 15

THRILLER Mark Wahlberg gives a solid performance in Baltasar Kormakur's skillfully shot if slightly uneven movie. Set in a murky New Orleans, it has former smuggler Wahlberg dragged back into the business to save his dimwit brother-in-law from mobsters led by the terrifyingly twitchy (and barely recognisable) Giovanni Ribisi. ADAM SMITH (US/UK/Ice/Fr 2012, violence, swearing, drug abuse, HD)

Hell or High Water

★★ ★ ★ 11.45pm-1.50am Film4 15

CRIME British director David Mackenzie (Starred Up) masters modern Americana like a native with this rustic noir. Set in the shadow of the financial collapse of 2008, it sees redneck brothers Ben Foster and Chris Pine team up to rob a series of banks in the Texas area, with lawman Jeff Bridges on their trail. It's a familiar but well-told tale, skewed by dry detail and snappy dialogue. DW (US 2016, violence, swearing, a sex scene, HD)

DRAMA

Guilt 9.00pm BBC2 (also BBC Scotland Tue 10.00pm. Full series on iPlayer)

SERIES FINALE

All four things must come to an end. This is, decidedly, the conclusion of Neil Forsyth's drama after three enjoyable series, though you'll need a sharp memory to spot all the loose ends tying up. Which they do here, satisfactorily.

It's a gently paced finale, albeit festooned with double-crosses between friends and foes. The tide has turned against crime boss Maggie Lynch and crooked banker Sir Jim Sturrock but, among the "baddies", what of hitman Teddy? He has beaten up lovely Kenny to the point of hospitalisation but, weirdly, still manages to emerge as a sympathetic character.

Forsyth told RT recently that the theme of this final run would be redemption. Some of his creations certainly achieve that. But what of Max? Will he shaft his few remaining allies in Edinburgh? Thanks to brother Jake – and the Lynches' daughter Erin, last seen in series two – Max may find what he's never realised he needs.

Watergate to Trump: Amol Rajan Interviews

7.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer
Chats with the likes of Richard Branson and Piers Morgan are all well and good, but this week Amol Rajan gets to interview two even more notable men: Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein, the American journalists whose work toppled President Richard Nixon.

Reporters for the Washington Post, the pair uncovered the Watergate burglary scandal that brought down the 37th president of the USA. Rajan quizzes them about that epic investigation and their lives since, as well as the role of political reporting today, the current state of US politics and just what it was like to be played by Robert Redford and Dustin Hoffman in the film All the President's Men. CERI THOMAS

Bangers and Cash: Restoring Classics

8.00pm Yesterday
Catch up via UKTV Play

DJ Stephanie Hirst plays dancefloor classics on Hits Radio each Saturday night, but by day she's a nostalgic lover of old Vauxhall Novas. The one she drives was once the family car owned by her late dad, and Stephanie still keeps original mixtapes in the stereo, old copies of Jackie magazine on the back seat and a plush Garfield soft toy suctioned to the window.

Here, she's been drafted in to give her opinion on a 1992 Merit Plus that's getting a makeover. "Stick your head in there – smell the 1990s," she says, almost overcome with emotion. But the big question is whether anyone at auction will get the kind of Proustian rush that will make the team a profit. DAVID BROWN

FOOD

Gordon Ramsay's Future Food Stars

9.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

The oddest moment in tonight's episode isn't the 13-step recipe for a salad – or the fact that one of those instructions is to shave an egg. It's when the semi-finalists are tasked with creating a social media campaign at a food market and MasterChef winner Kenny Tutt appears as a stallholder, without being explicitly named – at least in the preview I saw. Very strange.

This show should be every bit as compelling as The Apprentice. Particularly given that the food tasks set by Lord Sugar are often the best episodes (as in, they feature the most cock-ups). But like a split hollandaise, there's something that still doesn't quite come together in this televisual recipe. FRANCES TAYLOR

Without Sin

9.00pm ITV1 Catch up via ITVX

SERIES FINALE

A tougher-than-average crime drama reaches a suitably tense and visceral conclusion. With Charles unable to help her further from inside prison, grieving mum Stella takes incredible risks to find her daughter's real killer. Seemingly not fussed about her taxi being rather conspicuous, she drives to warehouse raves and drug dens – gang territory – in moments bristling with menace.

The series can't fully escape the tropes of the whodunnit, with its final torrent of twists, confessions and flashbacks, but its tough humanity wins out: an understated closing scene underlines how Without Sin has brought rough-edged, believable characters to a genre that often lacks them. JACK SEALE

9.00pm Channel 5 Catch up via My5

NEW SERIES "That's an arresting little tableau," says Alexander Armstrong in his typically understated way as he surveys a terrifying depiction of the underworld in a Buddhist temple.

He's exploring the country's eclectic culture so tries out as a choon pan man (a sort of mobile baker who advertises his wares with a Beethoven soundtrack), clears a mountain of elephant poo that will magically be turned into paper and tastes the infamous durian fruit.

He's less sure about releasing his inner demons in an exorcism (did he ever have any?). But Xander never minds sending himself up, which is probably why he tries surfing. JR

DRAMA

Last King of the Cross

9.00pm Sky Max
Catch up via Sky Go/Now

NEW SERIES The "Cross" in the title of this blood-soaked Australian gangster drama is Sydney's Kings Cross, a stretch of casinos and strip joints where various factions are vying for supremacy while the police turn a blind eye. It's a self-styled "mecca of sin" and a key player on the scene is John Ibrahim, a real-life nightclub owner whose autobiography inspired this seedy story, which finds heavies being beaten half to death every ten minutes and Tim Roth as a cocksure underworld boss.

Amid the bloodshed there are brief flashes of style, but on the whole, it's as blunt as the baseball bat used to cave in a career criminal's skull. DB

GAME FOR A LAUGH

Disaster-prone Ivo Graham is Taskmaster's latest have-a-go hero

COMEDY

Taskmaster

9.00pm C4
Catch up via C4 streaming

While it's always fun to watch comedy stalwarts such as Franke Boyle or Jenny Eclair humiliate themselves for points (a highlight this week – Boyle's undignified attempt to remove balls from a Velcro body suit), the real joy comes from the way the programme is able to showcase lesser-known or upcoming comics.

In the last series, it was bumbling John Kearns who became the nation's sweetheart – but this year Old Etonian Ivo Graham has really put himself on the map. His convoluted turns of phrase and general air of chaos make for great TV, with a previous task involving spoons, a blindfold and a magnet marking an all-time Taskmaster disaster. In this episode, all his most entertaining qualities are on fine display as he scrabbles to fish pineapples out of a filthy canal. Who needs dignity anyway? HUW FULLERTON

DAY

The Book of Eli ★★★ 9.00-11.15pm Film4 15

ACTION Returning to Freeview this week after five years away is this curious futuristic western from the Hughes Brothers (From Hell), which offers a sombre meditation on the uses and abuses of faith. Denzel Washington cuts an iconic figure, playing a lone adventurer travelling across a scorched post-apocalypse America, who fights to keep possession of a book he believes carries sacred powers. As the deliberately paced story sets Washington and ruthless Gary Oldman in bloody conflict over the eponymous tome, it's not too hard to guess the identity of the good book in question. TREVOR JOHNSTON (US 2009, violence, swearing, HD)

Summertime ★★★★★ 12.25-2.20pm

Talking Pictures TV PG

ROMANCE David Lean directs this touching take on Arthur Laurent's play about a lonely spinster enjoying a summer fling in Venice. Katharine Hepburn proves inspired casting in the lead, her reserve melting under the liberating effect of the city and the charms of Rossano Brazzi. Venice looks simply fabulous, too. TONY SLOMAN (US/UK 1955)

Comanche Station ★★★★★

12.35-2.10pm Film4 PG

WESTERN This final teaming of director Budd Boetticher and star Randolph Scott offers a fine meditation on ageing. Claude Akins co-stars as a flamboyant bounty hunter, and the final confrontation is especially effective. Also noteworthy is Burt Kennedy's screenplay, which utilises classic western iconography brilliantly. TS (US 1960, HD)

The Mummy ★★★

1.00-2.50pm Legend PG

HORROR After its huge successes with Dracula and Frankenstein, Hammer turned to another vintage Universal monster for its scream dream team of Peter

Cushing, Christopher Lee and director Terence Fisher. Cushing is marvellously crisp as the tomb-desecrating archaeologist, fending off the malevolent attentions of the gauze-wrapped Lee. ALAN JONES (UK 1959)

The Lone Wolf Meets a Lady ★★★ 3.00-4.30pm

Talking Pictures TV

MYSTERY This was the third of nine films starring Warren William as the jewel thief-turned-sleuth, who can never resist helping a damsel in distress. This entertaining instalment is neatly plotted and briskly paced, with the captivating Jean Muir involved in murder and the theft of a valuable necklace. TOM VALLANCE (US 1940, BW)

Licence to Kill ★★★

9.00-11.45pm ITV4 15

SPY Timothy Dalton followed his limp debut as James Bond in The Living Daylights with a tougher, more violent affair. More Lethal Weapon than 007, it sees Bond resign the day job to take revenge on the brutal drugs lord (Robert Davi) who has turned his best mate into shark bait. The film is boosted by fine action sequences and a fiery climax with a bone-crunching punch-up. JEREMY ASPINALL (US 1989, violence, swearing, HD)

The General's Daughter

★★★ 9.00-11.20pm

Great Movies 18

THRILLER This absorbing military whodunnit is let down by the lazy hamming of star John Travolta. He plays an armed forces cop called in to investigate the rape and murder of a woman officer, who also happens to be the daughter of military man James Cromwell. James Woods effortlessly steals the show as one of the murder suspects. JOHN FERGUSON (US/Ger 1999, violence, swearing, nudity)

Summer Holiday ★★★

10.50pm-12.35am BBC4 U

MUSICAL This was Cliff Richard's second hit vehicle (after The Young Ones) under director Peter Yates, who would go on to direct Bullitt. Cliff and pals (Melvyn Hayes, Teddy Green and Jeremy Bulloch) play mechanics who fix up a bus and set off for the South of France, picking up groovy chicks (including Una Stubbs) along the way. It's cheesy but entertaining. ANDREW COLLINS (UK 1962)

Son of a Gun ★★★

11.10pm-1.25am

Great Action 15

CRIME Ewan McGregor stars in this Aussie drama as a prisoner serving a long stretch who helps a teenage petty criminal (Brenton Thwaites) get through his own sentence – for a price. McGregor makes a decent fist of playing against type, but the film's continual genre shifts prove to be a distraction. ADAM SMITH (Aus 2013, violence, swearing, sex scenes, drug abuse)

DOCUMENTARY Hidden Treasures of the National Trust

9.00pm (not Northern Ireland) BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

Much like The Repair Shop, this enjoyable series introduces us to all sorts of conservation experts and shows us their painstaking work as they renovate the beautiful places and artefacts owned by the National Trust. In the fairy-tale surrounds of Vita Sackville-West's home at Sissinghurst, Kent, there are paper conservators, book preservers and paint specialists beaver away while a few miles down the road at Bateman's, the 400-year-old manor house where Rudyard Kipling used to live, a horologist is a frequent visitor because the NT often need him to tinker with a clock that Kipling made himself (not very well it turns out – it was starting to thud rather than chime).

It's a lovely glimpse of the tiny details that go into running NT properties. In Sissinghurst, part of the ceiling of the writer's study has collapsed. As they carefully repair the damage, they find some phone numbers scrawled on the nicotine-stained wall. It was obviously Vita's handy directory of important contacts, such as her husband Harold Nicholson's London home.

GARDENING Beechgrove Garden

7.30pm (10pm Northern Ireland)
BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

With the risk of frost hopefully gone, growers at both Beechgrove Garden and Gardeners' World (8pm, not NI) are busy planting out in preparation for the coming months. In the Beechgrove garden, they're using plants that will attract pollinators and checking how the dahlia tubers planted in April are coming on.

Monty Don is focusing on planting out tomatoes, beans and tropical gingers while Rekha Mistry is in her London allotment where she has some tips for growing aubergines. Plus, to coincide with Mental Health Awareness Week, journalist Rosie Kinchen reveals how horticulture helped her deal with postnatal depression. JR

FACTUAL Unreported World

7.30pm C4
Catch up via C4 streaming

The latest stage of our depressingly prevalent culture war involves the banning of drag shows in America. Right-wing evangelicals believe that cabaret artists reading stories to children in public spaces is a corruptive influence. At least 15 Republican-controlled states have introduced legislation to stop drag performances that can be seen by minors. In this report from the long-running investigative strand, Minnie Stephenson meets some of the beleaguered performers behind Drag Queen Story Hours, who have received death threats and fallen victim to a far-reaching LGBTQ+ crackdown. Stephenson also interviews some of their vociferous opponents. PAUL WHITELAW

PROPERTY The Big Interiors Battle

8.00pm C4
Catch up via C4 streaming

With only four contestants left, we learn a little more about their backgrounds and aspirations, as well as their interior design styles. Their challenge is to decorate the living room in the Sheffield apartment they eventually hope to win... and there are some wacky looks. One person plans to zone the space by wallpapering half the ceiling while another personalises the room by installing a faux fireplace. I'm not sure that either of those things are what judge Dara Huang had in mind when she briefed them.

Meanwhile, building owners Adam Higgins and Tim Heatley are quietly deciding how on earth to market the apartments of the four locked-out designers. JR

TRAVEL Susan Calman's Grand Day Out

8.00pm Channel 5
Catch up via My5

"For a woman who writes about murder, [Agatha Christie] doesn't half make me cry," confides Susan Calman as she fights to control her emotions in her favourite author's Devonshire home. Visiting Greenway on the banks of the River Dart features on Susan's bucket list so, not surprisingly, she's as excited as she was when she first saw Elvis's Memphis home, Graceland.

The climax of her joyous tour around Devon is at another spectacular building: the glorious art deco Burgh Island Hotel, which featured in two Christie stories. It's all very thrilling for her, although she's less keen when – twice – she's handed some fossilised poo. JR

Astrid and Raphaëlle are taken hostage in the Criminal Record Office by a woman who says she was wrongly accused of murder. It's a traumatic situation for the autistic Astrid (Sara Mortensen, always superb), especially when the police then detain her and confiscate her watch.

Of course, Astrid eventually cracks the case but this is really a story about friendship. Not just the one between "thimble and compass" (Raphaëlle and Astrid) but Astrid's wider circle. Just as we're basking in the glow of companionship, though, Commissaire Bachert makes a devastating announcement. JR

COMEDY DRAMA

Black Ops

9.30pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

This new sitcom has been a little rough around the edges, but there are green shoots. For example, this week Lucian Msamati has a brilliant guest turn as Youth Pastor Tomi, a self-absorbed minister who's taken ex-Community Support Officer Kay (Hammed Animashaun) under his wing... mainly by having him wax his Audi and mix his upcoming album.

Meanwhile, with their top-secret undercover mission still ongoing and their police contact gone, Dom (Gbemisola Ikumelo) is more worried about fending off violent gang members. And when a drug deal goes bad, she has to persuade Kay to compromise on his principles – or at least stop trying to sell Pastor Tomi's single. HUW FULLERTON

CHAT SHOW

The Chris and Rosie Ramsey Show

10.40pm (10.45pm, Northern Ireland) BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

The married-couple chat hosts have carved their niche by inviting celebrities and their other halves into the studio to talk about those quirks that all romantic partnerships have.

This week it's a little different – the guests are father and son: Jack Whitehall and his plain-speaking father, Michael. As well as that change of dynamic, the Whitehalls already have a career based on presenting their difficult relationship – but presumably they have plenty of spare material to share. Plus, there are regulars Please Keep Me Anonymous, with its audience confessions and the miniature game show, It Goes or I Go. JACK SEALE

It's five years on since Oly Chalmers-Davis (Nathalie Morris) unexpectedly gave birth in the school toilets. Since then, she and her former classmate Santi Hernandez (Carlos Sanson Jr) have managed reasonably well co-parenting their daughter Jacinda (Ava Cannon) in this Australian comedy-drama.

In season three's opening double-bill, we catch up with the very different – but both chaotic – Chalmers-Davis and Hernandez clans when an excited JJ starts school. However, an even bigger change is that Santi has a new love interest.

The creation of Claudia Kavan (Oly's mum Angie) and Kelsey Munro, Bump's an enjoyable mix of laugh-out-loud moments, wipe-a-tear scenes, soapy drama and occasional social commentary. JR

FILM OF THE DAY

Baby Done

9.00-10.25pm BBC3

COMEDY Writer Sophie Henderson and director

Curtis Vowell – a couple in real life – inject a familiar subject with some Kiwi snark in this drama about an unplanned pregnancy. After discovering she's expecting, free-spirited Zoe (Rose Matafeo) is sent into a tailspin of denial and defiance. While she's desperate to cram in as much adventure as possible before giving birth, partner Tim (Matthew Lewis) becomes unexpectedly responsible. The two leads make for a likeable couple, while twee indie music supplies the soundtrack. ANDREW COLLINS (NZ 2020, swearing, sexual references, drug abuse, HD)

The Quiet Man

1.25-4.15pm Film4

COMEDY DRAMA John Ford

won his fourth best director Oscar for this immensely popular chunk of old blarney, much of it shot on location in west Ireland. John Wayne is splendid as the boxer returning to his roots, with feisty Maureen O'Hara more than a match for him. If you're in the right mood, this will make you laugh and cry. TONY SLOMAN (US 1952, HD)

Oliver Twist

3.00-5.25pm

Talking Pictures TV

DRAMA David Lean's precise adaptation of the Dickens novel brims with unforgettable scenes and performances, especially Alec Guinness as Fagin and Robert Newton's frightening Bill Sikes. From the opening, with Oliver's mother struggling to the workhouse to give birth, to the Docklands climax, Lean brings the tale vividly to life. ADRIAN TURNER (UK 1948, BW)

Last Passenger

9.00-10.55pm Legend

ACTION Omid Nooshin directs this diverting thriller with aplomb. Dougray Scott notices that all is not well aboard his train and, on finding that it is hurtling towards its doom, he enlists the help of his fellow travellers to try to avert disaster. Nooshin ably arranges his high-speed set pieces. DAVID PARKINSON (UK 2013, swearing)

The Proposal

10.45pm-12.40am ITV1

ROMCOM Sandra Bullock is a big-shot New York editor who pressures her assistant (Ryan Reynolds) into marrying her to avoid deportation back to Canada. When officials nose around, the pair are forced to cement the lie by spending the weekend with Reynolds's family. A gentle screwball plot is fleshed out with strong turns from the two leads, who share real chemistry. KAREN KRIZANOVICH (US 2009, swearing, HD)

Grace Jones: Bloodlight and Bami

11.00pm-12.55am BBC4

DOCUMENTARY It's not easy being an icon, as we find out in a film that presents the story of Grace Jones, who turns 75 today. Director Sophie Fiennes follows the unique artist into the studio and on tour, and also examines her upbringing to uncover the secret of her power. It adds up to a vivid reminder of why Jones is such an inspiring figure. VICTORIA LUXFORD (UK 2017, swearing, HD)

Carnival of Souls

Talking Pictures TV

HORROR A church organist finds herself in a strange limbo, haunted by spectral ghouls, in this cult classic, which receives a rare showing tonight. Herk Harvey's zero-budget sole film as director is a genuinely eerie chiller that George A Romero credits as being his major inspiration for Night of the Living Dead. Harvey also plays the lead phantom pursuing Candace Hilligoss. ALAN JONES (US 1962, BW)

Trading Places

12.10-2.05am C4

COMEDY This reworking of The Prince and the Pauper is a rattling slapstick showcase for the considerable talents of Eddie Murphy and Dan Aykroyd. However, there is no question that the acting honours go to veterans Don Ameche and Ralph Bellamy, as the mischievous business bigwigs whose wagers bring about the respective rise and fall of the stars. DP (US 1983, swearing, nudity, HD)

Weird Science

12.30-2.00am BBC1

(starts 12.35am in N Ireland)

COMEDY FANTASY This early John Hughes effort stars Anthony Michael Hall and Ian Mitchell-Smith as sex-obsessed geeks who summon up the computer-generated woman of their dreams (Kelly LeBrock). Much of the humour is overly crass, but Hughes is a sharp writer and it's worth a look to see Robert Downey Jr in an early role. JOHN FERGUSON (US 1985, some swearing, brief nudity, HD)

21st-Century Relaxation Tape
Sunday 4.30pm Radio 4

DURING LOCKDOWN, MANY of us looking for respite from daily death tolls and Downing Street briefings turned to the calming presence of Bob Ross, the American artist whose idiosyncratic 1980s painting tutorials on YouTube and BBC4 proved a soothing balm.

But it seems his quaintly bucolic paintings weren't the only draw. We may not have realised it, but we were plugging into a phenomenon of people using noise as an aid to relax or focus the mind, specifically the sort of videos of sounds found online that prompt an autonomous sensory meridian response (ASMR) – or tingly feeling in your scalp. The sounds in question can range from someone cutting sponges with a knife to scratching a pig behind the ear and it grunting softly in appreciation.

According to composer and Oxford University lecturer Professor Jennifer Walshe, whose programme on Radio 4 explores the phenomenon, Bob Ross is seen as an unwitting progenitor of the current ASMR boom. "It's both the brush on the canvas and the palette knife stirring the paint, but also the intimacy of a person speaking gently about how to do something, that people find soothing."

She also looks at white noise (sounds playing at every frequency), brown noise (sounds that mimic the random motion of inanimate objects in gas or liquids) and binaural beats (an auditory illusion when you listen to two tones with different frequencies and your brain produces a beat with a different frequency).

'Parents know that white noise helps babies go to sleep'

It all sounds fantastically esoteric, but Walshe points out that people use music and sounds every day to alter their moods. "Any parent will know that different forms of white noise, whether it's the oven extractor fan or hoovering or driving around in the car, all help the baby go to sleep because they simulate the acoustic environment of the womb. And there's a reason why, when you go into a bar, there's music playing really loudly and why Deliveroo workers listen to high-intensity music while they're biking around."

There's a long history of sound as a relaxation aid, going back to Erik Satie's "Furniture" music in 1917, through 60s and 70s albums such as Songs of the Humpback Whale and self-help tapes from the 80s, and Walshe is obsessed by it. "I have some absolute treasures; I have Christian yoga meditations, a self-published Irish cassette by a Jesuit priest who got into yoga, and a cassette of relaxation exercises released by the ICI chemicals company for its employees."

THE RIGHT NOTE

Jennifer Walshe

WHAT'S CHANGED NOW is the internet, which over the past ten or 15 years has allowed for the evolution of different soundscapes catering to different tastes, something Walshe relishes. "I think it's amazing! I think ASMR in particular is really special because often the sounds are niche or quirky or quite surreal. If each one needed to be released on vinyl, we'd never get all those recordings."

It's this sort of individuality that points to the future of the sonic relaxation aid, as companies look to expand on the craze for wellness and self-care by producing apps that can use AI to mine your health and lifestyle data and offer a tailored soundscape for different times of day, whether preparing for an important meeting or going for a run. Walshe also connects it to the obsession of Silicon Valley entrepreneurs with longevity and biohacking the body. "There are people interested in the datafication of the self and the quantification of the self, all these transhumanist practices."

It's a leap from watching Bob Ross paint to the likes of Elon Musk eyeing immortality, but Walshe sees 21st-century relaxation as more grounded in everyday life. "Now we're looking for ways to relax, because everyone's stressed, they're overworked, we have a cost-of-living crisis and people are finding life really tough."

Sounds like the perfect excuse to listen to a grunting pig for a few hours. DAVID CRAWFORD

In the Studio

Tuesday 11.30am/10.30pm

World Service

Along with Radio 4's Front Row, In the Studio is essential listening for anyone who wants to know what creators have to say about their art. This week, actor, fundraiser, writer and comedy veteran Sir Lenny Henry (left) talks to presenter Vishva Samani about August in England, his first stage play as a writer, now at London's Bush Theatre. It takes the form of a monologue, performed by Henry, in which August Henderson mulls over his life, from leaving Jamaica and planting roots in the West Midlands to the present day when he faces the threat of deportation, a victim of the still unresolved Windrush scandal.

While Vernon Kay (below) may have had the buffer of interim manager Gary Davies to shield him from the immediate effects of taking over from Ken Bruce, he'll still be judged against the PopMaster. Book of the Week: Into the Night: a Year with the Police

Monday-Friday 9.45am Radio 4 FM

What's it really like to patrol the streets of south London as a special constable? Matt Lloyd-Rose's deadpan account – read by Jack Parris – of the year he spent doing just that is a revelation. The glimpse it offers into routine police work adds up to a portrait of a whole society, comprising not just the citizens he encounters who might be up to no good, but his own flawed colleagues. Do you know what an IC1 male is? An IC3 male? It's in such details that the value of Lloyd-Rose's book really lies. SIMON O'HAGAN

ROCK GOSSIP

Night of Show

As with so many podcasts, this peek behind the scenes of famous rock shows grew out of lockdown, when writer and podcaster Tom Wright met then out-of-work concert promoter Adam Wilkes in Singapore. The first episode is top-notch, telling the story behind Prince's barnstorming half-time show at the 2007 Super Bowl and his musical face-off with Michael Jackson during a residency at the Rio Hotel in Las Vegas. Wilkes's connections are the backbone of the show as John Meglen and Paul Gongaware (promoters for both Prince and Jackson) spill the beans on working for such mercurial talents – "Don't mention Michael when working with Prince [and vice versa]"; "Prince hated blue jeans". Wright's narration can be a touch robotic, but everything loosens up once the backstage gossip starts. DAVID CRAWFORD

IT'S THE CRAIC

Tommy, Hector and Laurita

During lockdown, Derry Girls star Tommy Tiernan started a weekly podcast with schoolfriend Shane O'hEochagáin and Laurita Blewitt, a radio presenter and producer. The warm-hearted trio are currently on a six-month break, promising a return in September, which gives newcomers the chance to catch up with their funny, free-ranging craic to date. It feels like 40 minutes in the company of clever friends who have an endless supply of shaggy dog tales. FIONA HUGHES

WORLD AFFAIRS

The Global Jigsaw

Harnessing the resources of the BBC Monitoring division, this authoritative new podcast provides a perspective on the world that isn't offered anywhere else. A fascinating and disturbing first episode looks at how jihadi leader Abu Mohammed al-Jawlani has sought respectability in the northern Syrian region of Idlib. With the earthquake that ravaged Idlib earlier this year giving Jawlani an opportunity to present himself as a good citizen, how should the West react? SIMON O'HAGAN

DOCUMENTARY

Poison

Young vulnerable people are buying poison to end their lives. If this sounds like something out of Black Mirror, or a particularly gruesome Nordic noir, it is sadly all too true. In this three-part podcast, James Beal, social affairs editor at The Times, traces the suicide of a 22-year-old British student to a man in Canada selling a lethal substance to hundreds of customers – without taking any responsibility for the consequences. It's a chilling scenario, but can anything be done? CAROLINE FROST

RELATIONSHIPS

Love Letters

Meredith Goldstein has been an advice columnist for The Boston Globe's Love Letters for 14 years. This podcast is an extension of that, where she explores a different theme each season related to relationships, joined by guests seeking guidance. For her eighth, it's about love and money, and she tackles everything from financial infidelity to generational wealth. The first episode is about keeping credit card debt secret from a spouse. LAURA RUTKOWSKI

DOCUMENTARY The Rathband Tapes

Many of us gripped by ITV's The Hunt for Raoul Moat were left wanting to know more, not about the murderer but one of his victims, PC David Rathband. In 2010, the latter was shot in the face and blinded. Trying to adapt to a new life, he narrated his story to biographer Tony Horne. Their book, Tango 190, was published two months after Rathband took his own life in 2012. Horne plays extracts from interviews with Rathband and talks to his brother. DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

If Tom Hanks will read an audiobook, who wants a robot?

THE RECORDING OF an audiobook is one of those things technology has yet to make any easier. The author or an actor has to go into a studio and read the whole thing while an engineer listens with one eye on the text, pulling them back for anything that could be improved. As a process it takes the time it takes. It can be up to a week, dependent on fluffs or fatigue. The big reads, such as Miriam Margolyes's brilliant Bleak House, must take months.

People like Stephen Fry are much sought after, not merely because their delivery is good and people trust them but also because they nail the text first go, which saves time and money. It would be silly to have anyone other than Tom Hanks read his first novel on Radio 4 this week, but not all novelists are so confident with the spoken word.

It's no surprise the big publishers are keeping an eye on the advance of AI and wondering whether they might soon be able to get a machine to produce an acceptable audiobook merely by scanning the text, dispensing with the human element altogether. Apple Books are already offering TTS (text to speech) technology to small publishers wishing to turn their fiction into audiobooks. "You can listen to samples for your genre and choose which type of voice works best," they promise.

AUDIBLE CLAIMS THAT everything on its platform has to be read by a human. A few weeks ago I heard a sample from their "Erotica" section that sounded to me and an actor friend as though it was being read by a machine. When I wished to refer to it for this column, it had been mysteriously withdrawn.

The software is already good. It will get better. Whether it will produce a voice sympathetic enough to command our attention for 12 hours remains to be seen (or heard). Beyond all this there is the question of the fundamental human contract that underpins the audiobook experience. If they can't be bothered to read it, why should I be bothered to listen to it?

Tom Hanks reads for Book at Bedtime (10.45pm Monday-Friday Radio 4); see page 130. See David's pick of the week, My Time Capsule, opposite page

3.00pm Radio 4

The first in a new series of plays that dramatise pivotal moments in recent history, Ryan Craig's take on the birth of the first IVF baby in 1978 (Louise Brown, above with her mother Lesley) examines the story from two sides. The first drips with emotion as we follow the ups and downs of John and Lesley Brown's desperate wish to have a baby. On the other side, the main emotion is anger as mavericks physiologist Robert Edwards and obstetrician Patrick Steptoe battle what feels like an uncaring medical establishment, to prove that in-vitro fertilisation can work and is ethically sound.

8.00pm Radio 4

Polymathic radio presenter Stuart Maconie is an astute state-of-the-nation chronicler with books such as his recently published The Full English: a Journey in Search of a Country and Its People. So he's a natural to tell the story of JB Priestley, who as a prolific writer and broadcaster could be said to have helped bind society together in the mid-20th century. But in spite of the enduring popularity and relevance of Priestley's play An Inspector Calls, his status is nothing like what it once was. This is fine work from Maconie in making the case for his rehabilitation. SIMON O'HAGAN

TODAY'S CHOICES

Sunday Night Is Music Night

8.00pm Radio 2

There couldn't be a more perfect tribute to the late, perpetually beaming Strictly judge Len Goodman (above) than this concert he presented at the Watford Colosseum in 2016. His stories – his relationship with dance from the age of 14; the history of ballroom dance – are all told with his much-loved wit and passion. The music from the BBC Concert Orchestra illustrates most of the ten dances acknowledged by the National Association of Teachers of Dancing as well as new-fangled “alternative rhythms” such as salsa. I was profoundly moved – and what an appropriate word that is. DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

Between the Ears

6.45pm Radio 3

One of the challenges faced by people with mental health difficulties is finding the language to describe their experiences. But what if music could convey the feelings that words can't? That's where sound artist Gawain Hewitt comes in. His engaging presence is at the heart of this intriguing half-hour in which – at the invitation of Radio 3's Researcher in Residence, Sally Marlow of King's College London – he comes together with a group of people with experience of mental illness, and they start composing. SIMON O'HAGAN

6.45 Between the Ears

RT Scoring Mental Health. Popular audio representations of mental illness are often discordant or otherworldly, yet those with mental illness often describe sounds reflecting monotony, lack of connectedness, repetition, silence, control, and lack of control. Radio 3's researcher in residence, Professor Sally Marlow (of King's College London), asked composer and sound artist Gawain Hewitt to work with people with experience of mental illness to co-compose works evoking a wide spectrum of symptoms and feelings that words alone cannot convey succinctly, heard here. Producer Adrian Washbourne

Book at Bedtime: The Making of Another Major Motion Picture Masterpiece

10.45pm Radio 4

If anyone is going to have an inside track on Hollywood movie-making, it is a star who's been at the top for 40 years. Here, Tom Hanks (above) narrates his debut novel about the making of a star-studded, multimillion-dollar superhero action flick. A cast including a troubled soldier, an eccentric director, an ambitious production assistant and a gifted young comic-book artist are just a few of the colourful characters populating a tale that is as much an intriguing reflection on America's past and present as it is the world of movie magic. JEREMY ASPINALL

Radio 3 in Concert

7.30pm Radio 3

The only Swiss member of the 1920s Parisian composers' collective Les Six, Honegger once set what one critic calls "the filthiest libretto in opera history". But he was also drawn to religious subjects, not least in his dramatic oratorio Joan of Arc at the Stake, a modernist take on the Bach Passions. In this Salzburg Festival performance, the title role is spoken by French-Swiss actor Irène Jacob, star of Krzysztof Kieslowski's film Three Colours: Red. MARK PAPPENHEIM

TODAY'S CHOICES

Great Lives

4.30pm Radio 4

Jon Ronson's salute to Specials frontman Terry Hall (above) begins with the memory of an "excitingly feral" gig where 12-year-old Ronson feigned illness to get a better view of the Coventry band from the side, prompting Hall – "the coolest man in the world" – to see if he was OK. It reveals much about the enigmatic singer, whose lugubrious, stock-still presence on stage belied the approachable man away from the limelight. Ronson even wonders if a terrible childhood incident may have informed that kindness. Friends of Hall also remember a keen football fan, while bandmate Lynval Golding (in his first interview since Hall died in December) sheds light on their career, not least that iconic 1981 hit, Ghost Town. JEREMY ASPINALL

Drama: Downstream

2.15pm Radio 4

The elusive undercurrents running through Nick Warburton's play are as deep as the river that flows past Platters' boatyard where the story is set. Libby (played by the reliably good Monica Dolan) narrates and is the most compelling character. She has returned to the family-owned marina where her brother, the reticent Pat (Oliver Chris), has technically taken over in her long absence. Libby doesn't like what she finds but there are more questions than answers as the plot unfolds – it feels like we're being set up for a series. FIONA HUGHES

Free Thinking

10.00pm Radio 3

The Rocky Horror Show is back in London's West End for the umpteenth time, now on the occasion of its 50th anniversary. I had issues with the original stage production (above), done in the Royal Court theatre's former rehearsal room, and many more with the 1975 film version, which at the time I described as "an expensive sixth-form revue". Oops. Richard O'Brien's horror-comic musical, a paean to the "science-fiction double feature", now credited with introducing the present concept of sexual fluidity, has become an international cult sensation and a new form of entertainment in which audience and cast are often indistinguishable. I can't wait to find out from Louise Crecchan and Joan Passey (experts in Victorian gothic) and Paul Baker (author of the book Camp!) how I got it so wrong. DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

DJ and reporter Frank McWeeny talks about his latest two-part documentary series with real passion. His theory is that, even in the most challenging parts of the world, in times of trouble where people go at night to listen to music, dance, express themselves is where the human spirit not only survives but thrives. He visits Beirut for the first episode to meet Jade, musician and founder of the Grand Factory Club. More than a night club, it's a hub of creativity where an initiative has turned young people without opportunity into producers, and the music of Arabic hip-hop artists is bringing a new sense of identity. FIONA HUGHES

Rylan: How to Be a Man

11.00pm Radio 4
Speaking about his first podcast (all ten episodes are on BBC Sounds from 10 May), Rylan Clark states he wasn't afraid of asking the big questions about what it means to be a modern man: the conversations cover everything from "old-fashioned stereotypes to gender identity". Rylan's guests include model David Gandy, boxer Amir Khan and transgender man Freddy McConnell. But I'm not surprised that the series kicks off today with Hamza Yassin (above), the Sudanese-born wildlife cameraman who won Strictly last year. Yassin has revealed virtually nothing about his love life and so his declarations about "dating and feeling broody" will be firsts. No preview is available and I am unable to hazard a guess at how "wild animals give him inspiration on how to be a good man". Or which animals they are. DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

Crossing Continents

11.30am Radio 4
News reports from the United States about increased homicide rates are sadly all-too familiar. However, with New Orleans – a place hailed for its music and Mardi Gras – now labelled "the murder capital of the US", city resident Anna Adams delves into what's going on and finds issues ranging from a depleted, demoralised police force to fatherless families. Yet, it is the unique after-effects of Hurricane Katrina in 2005 that require scrutiny, displacing communities and creating a traumatised generation of "Katrina babies" who are now reaching the age of the typical offender. The testimonies of the bereaved are powerfully moving but there's resilience, too, as locals step up to provide a musical route out of trouble. JEREMY ASPINALL

The press found the latter ponderous – the music too symphonic and "undanceable". Others hailed the ballet as a great success, though the tsar's reaction was lukewarm. The year after its premiere, Tchaikovsky found himself touring to America, where his reception as something of a celebrity had a huge impact upon him. RT New Orleans is the murder capital of the United States: in 2022 it had more homicides per capita than any other major city. Other potentially lethal offences are also at sky high levels and the city's problems can be linked to familiar causes, such as economic disparity, poor education and the prevalence of guns. However, other factors appear unique to New Orleans, and stretch back to the chaos and mistrust of authority that followed Hurricane Katrina in 2005, while the justice system is dysfunctional with the police department chronically understaffed. Anna Adams meets those at the sharp end of this crisis in her adoptive city, and asks what went wrong. Also broadcast in Assignment at 8.05pm on World Service. 11.00pm Radio 3
Comedian James Acaster (above) may be a good booking for a TV entertainment show, but he has also developed an interesting sideline as the leader of a 40-strong music collective (before comedy he played in a band with friends). While indulging his musical whims here with a curated mixtape, his introduction is suitably comic as he describes the reaction to playing left-field jazz-pop at working men's clubs. The tracks he's chosen range from modern electronica by revered Brazilian samba singer Elza Soares – incredibly dubbed “the voice of the millennium” in 1999 – to Japanese reggae-pop from Kiki Hitomi, and the experimental hip-hop trio the Sooper Swag Project rhyming over unusual time signatures. DAVID CRAWFORD

Could Kaija Saariaho be the greatest living composer you've never heard of? At 70, the Paris-based, Finnish-born “spectralist” certainly commands the respect of her peers: in 2019, when BBC Music Magazine polled 174 of today's leading note-spinners, Saariaho came first among the living in the resulting Top 50 of history's greatest composers. Yet her music – which one academic calls an “inner world” of “multi-sensory, colourful, continually shifting dreamscapes and landscapes” – is perhaps something of an acquired taste. So why not take the plunge and immerse yourself in it, courtesy of tonight's concert, recorded at the climax of the BBC Symphony Orchestra's all-day Total Immersion event at the Barbican earlier this month? MARK PAPPENHEIM

7/9. With its outrageous audience, pioneering programme, all-night film marathons and a vicious house cat, the Scala cinema in London's King's Cross blazed a trail across the repertory cinema scene of the 70s, 80s and 90s. Ellen E Jones separates truth from legend with the man who started it all, film producer and director Stephen Woolley. Mark Kermod discusses the age of cinema before video and streaming with film writer and curator Anne Bilson. And Carol Morley remembers a Scala moment that's haunted her dreams ever since.

BBC Local Radio

Face behind the voice

Age 26
Current job
Co-presenter of BBC Introducing in Scotland for Radio Scotland (8-10pm Fridays).

"We get hundreds of uploads every week and on Tuesday we usually pick the track list that's going to go out on Friday, completely live." She also presents Friday's Radio 1 early breakfast show (5-6.30am), followed by Best New Pop.

CV Born in Edinburgh and raised in Lanark, her father Lewis J Jackson was a singer who toured with the band Django. From the age of 15 she was a runner for Xenomania music production, then at 16 joined the group Neon Jungle, who scored four Top 20 hits between 2013-14. Shereen and two of her brothers formed the Cutkelvins, semi-finalists on The X Factor in 2017. Their tour of Italy and Portugal begins on 26 May.

Last year she made her acting debut in an episode of Van der Valk on ITV, and she has just finished filming 26 episodes of Love! Love! Love! for CBBC.

Social media – yes or no? "It's like a secondary job to me. It's a great way to be in touch with your audience. I've got incredible opportunities through social media – in fact one of the bosses from the BBC messaged me on Instagram and that's how I got into radio."

Best moments "We were a brand-new girl group, we'd had one single out and we were asked to perform for Victoria's Secret in New York – on the same bill as Taylor Swift. Also, the first arena gig we did in Manchester, my prayers came to life. I looked into the crowd and shed a tear – I'd seen it all in my head, now I was living it."

Worst moments "At the Wireless Festival they were running behind and had a bigger artist coming on, so half-way through our song, they cut the backing track and said, 'Get off stage!' We just continued and got the audience singing along to the chorus."

Off air Lives between Scotland and London, whenever possible with

Shereen Cutkelvin

partner Jamaal Shurland, whom she met on The X Factor (he's a member of Rak-Su, 2017 winners).

First radio memory "I used to listen on the school bus to Rickie, Melvin and Charlie on Kiss. They had such great banter. They were doing their show next door to me at Radio 1 recently. I gave them a wave."

Favourite broadcasters "I'd probably say Rickie, Melvin and Charlie. I try to keep that tone of just speaking to your friends."

Ambition/Dream job "Singing is my main passion, it's like the roots of my tree and as I've grown older I've grown different branches. If I could land a part acting and singing, that would be great."

Secret skills "I enjoy making cocktails. One of the first things I got for my new flat was a wee bar. I like a Dark and Stormy (dark rum and ginger beer) because it takes me back to Barbados, sitting on the beach and listening to the waves."

BBC Radio Scotland

Face behind the voice

Shereen Cutkelvin

Age 26
Current job
Co-presenter of BBC Introducing in Scotland for Radio Scotland (8-10pm Fridays).

"We get hundreds of uploads every week and on Tuesday we usually pick the track list that's going to go out on Friday, completely live."

She also presents Friday's Radio 1 early breakfast show (5-6.30am), followed by Best New Pop.

CV Born in Edinburgh and raised in Lanark, her father Lewis J Jackson was a singer who toured with the band Django. From the age of 15 she was a runner for Xenomania music production, then at 16 joined the group Neon Jungle, who scored four Top 20 hits between 2013-14. Shereen and two of her brothers formed the Cutkelvins, semi-finalists on The X Factor in 2017. Their tour of Italy and Portugal begins on 26 May.

Last year she made her acting debut in an episode of Van der Valk on ITV, and she has just finished filming 26 episodes of Love! Love! Love! for CBBC.

Social media – yes or no? "It's like a secondary job to me. It's a great way to be in touch with your audience. I've got incredible opportunities through social media – in fact one of the bosses from the BBC messaged me on Instagram and that's how I got into radio."

Best moments "We were a brand-new girl group, we'd had one single out and we were asked to perform for Victoria's Secret in New York – on the same bill as Taylor Swift. Also, the first arena gig we did in Manchester, my prayers came to life. I looked into the crowd and shed a tear – I'd seen it all in my head, now I was living it."

Worst moments "At the Wireless Festival they were running behind and had a bigger artist coming on, so half-way through our song, they cut the backing track and said, 'Get off stage!' We just continued and got the audience singing along to the chorus."

Off air Lives between Scotland and London, whenever possible with partner Jamaal Shurland, whom she met on The X Factor (he's a member of Rak-Su, 2017 winners).

First radio memory "I used to listen on the school bus to Rickie, Melvin and Charlie on Kiss. They had such great banter. They were doing their show next door to me at Radio 1 recently. I gave them a wave."

Favourite broadcasters "I'd probably say Rickie, Melvin and Charlie. I try to keep that tone of just speaking to your friends."

Ambition/Dream job "Singing is my main passion, it's like the roots of my tree and as I've grown older I've grown different branches. If I could land a part acting and singing, that would be great."

Secret skills "I enjoy making cocktails. One of the first things I got for my new flat was a wee bar. I like a Dark and Stormy (dark rum and ginger beer) because it takes me back to Barbados, sitting on the beach and listening to the waves." DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

BBC Radio Ulster

Face behind the voice

Shereen Cutkelvin

Age 26
Current job
Co-presenter of BBC Introducing in Scotland for Radio Scotland (8-10pm Fridays).

"We get hundreds of uploads every week and on Tuesday we usually pick the track list that's going to go out on Friday, completely live."

She also presents Friday's Radio 1 early breakfast show (5-6.30am), followed by Best New Pop.

CV Born in Edinburgh and raised in Lanark, her father Lewis J Jackson was a singer who toured with the band Django. From the age of 15 she was a runner for Xenomania music production, then at 16 joined the group Neon Jungle, who scored four Top 20 hits between 2013-14. Shereen and two of her brothers formed the Cutkelvins, semi-finalists on The X Factor in 2017. Their tour of Italy and Portugal begins on 26 May.

Last year she made her acting debut in an episode of Van der Valk on ITV, and she has just finished filming 26 episodes of Love! Love! Love! for CBBC.

Social media – yes or no? "It's like a secondary job to me. It's a great way to be in touch with your audience. I've got incredible opportunities through social media – in fact one of the bosses from the BBC messaged me on Instagram and that's how I got into radio."

Best moments "We were a brand-new girl group, we'd had one single out and we were asked to perform for Victoria's Secret in New York – on the same bill as Taylor Swift. Also, the first arena gig we did in Manchester, my prayers came to life. I looked into the crowd and shed a tear – I'd seen it all in my head, now I was living it."

Worst moments "At the Wireless Festival they were running behind and had a bigger artist coming on, so half-way through our song, they cut the backing track and said, 'Get off stage!' We just continued and got the audience singing along to the chorus."

Off air Lives between Scotland and London, whenever possible with partner Jamaal Shurland, whom she met on The X Factor (he's a member of Rak-Su, 2017 winners).

First radio memory "I used to listen on the school bus to Rickie, Melvin and Charlie on Kiss. They had such great banter. They were doing their show next door to me at Radio 1 recently. I gave them a wave."

Favourite broadcasters "I'd probably say Rickie, Melvin and Charlie. I try to keep that tone of just speaking to your friends."

Ambition/Dream job "Singing is my main passion, it's like the roots of my tree and as I've grown older I've grown different branches. If I could land a part acting and singing, that would be great."

Secret skills "I enjoy making cocktails. One of the first things I got for my new flat was a wee bar. I like a Dark and Stormy (dark rum and ginger beer) because it takes me back to Barbados, sitting on the beach and listening to the waves." DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

BBC Radio Wales

Face behind the voice

Shereen Cutkelvin

Age 26
Current job
Co-presenter of BBC Introducing in Scotland for Radio Scotland (8-10pm Fridays).

"We get hundreds of uploads every week and on Tuesday we usually pick the track list that's going to go out on Friday, completely live."

She also presents Friday's Radio 1 early breakfast show (5-6.30am), followed by Best New Pop.

CV Born in Edinburgh and raised in Lanark, her father Lewis J Jackson was a singer who toured with the band Django. From the age of 15 she was a runner for Xenomania music production, then at 16 joined the group Neon Jungle, who scored four Top 20 hits between 2013-14. Shereen and two of her brothers formed the Cutkelvins, semi-finalists on The X Factor in 2017. Their tour of Italy and Portugal begins on 26 May.

Last year she made her acting debut in an episode of Van der Valk on ITV, and she has just finished filming 26 episodes of Love! Love! Love! for CBBC.

Social media – yes or no? "It's like a secondary job to me. It's a great way to be in touch with your audience. I've got incredible opportunities through social media – in fact one of the bosses from the BBC messaged me on Instagram and that's how I got into radio."

Best moments "We were a brand-new girl group, we'd had one single out and we were asked to perform for Victoria's Secret in New York – on the same bill as Taylor Swift. Also, the first arena gig we did in Manchester, my prayers came to life. I looked into the crowd and shed a tear – I'd seen it all in my head, now I was living it."

Worst moments "At the Wireless Festival they were running behind and had a bigger artist coming on, so half-way through our song, they cut the backing track and said, 'Get off stage!' We just continued and got the audience singing along to the chorus."

Off air Lives between Scotland and London, whenever possible with partner Jamaal Shurland, whom she met on The X Factor (he's a member of Rak-Su, 2017 winners).

First radio memory "I used to listen on the school bus to Rickie, Melvin and Charlie on Kiss. They had such great banter. They were doing their show next door to me at Radio 1 recently. I gave them a wave."

Favourite broadcasters "I'd probably say Rickie, Melvin and Charlie. I try to keep that tone of just speaking to your friends."

Ambition/Dream job "Singing is my main passion, it's like the roots of my tree and as I've grown older I've grown different branches. If I could land a part acting and singing, that would be great."

Secret skills "I enjoy making cocktails. One of the first things I got for my new flat was a wee bar. I like a Dark and Stormy (dark rum and ginger beer) because it takes me back to Barbados, sitting on the beach and listening to the waves." DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

MORE THAN A PRETTY FACE

Hollywood superstar Tom Hanks has written a novel. But he's not the first actor to swap the camera for the keyboard...

Book at Bedtime

Monday–Friday 10.45pm Radio 4

FOR SOME MOVIE stars, being famous on the big screen isn't enough – they want a starring role on bookshelves, too. And although every actor and his dog can churn out an autobiography (even Terry, the cairn terrier who was Toto in The Wizard of Oz, has a ghostwritten tome that gets 4.8 stars on Amazon), some prefer to try.

Take Tom Hanks, whose debut novel The Making of Another Major Motion Picture Masterpiece (see below right) is Radio 4's Book at Bedtime this week. For every genre – from frothy bonkbusters to gripping thrillers – there's an actor willing to put pen to paper, and some of their books make surprisingly good reads. Here are eight of the best...

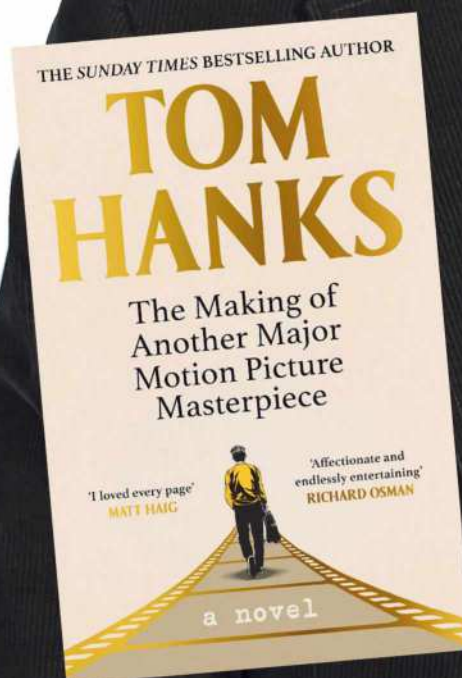

POSTCARDS FROM THE EDGE CARRIE FISHER

The book that every film star wishes they had written, this 1987 semi-autobiographical bestseller follows a drug-addict actress on the road to recovery. The novel (the first of four by the former Princess Leia) is peppered with the trademark wit that made Fisher an in-demand script doctor, polishing the dialogue on films including The Wedding Singer and Hook. This one made it onto the big screen, too, as an Oscar-nominated adaptation starring Meryl Streep and Shirley MacLaine.

THE MAKING OF ANOTHER MAJOR MOTION PICTURE MASTERPIECE

TOM HANKS

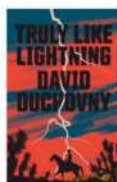

Hanks proved he could write with his 2017 collection of short stories, Uncommon Type (at the time, novelist Ann Patchett likened reading it to “finding out that Alice Munro is also the greatest actress of our time”). Now, he's turned his attention to the epic novel, though he's sticking to what he knows best: the book focuses on the arduous journey towards the production of a big-budget superhero film.

To order The Making of Another Major Motion Picture Masterpiece by Tom Hanks (Hutchinson Heinemann, £22, published 9 May) for £19.50 incl p&p, call 03302 232 639* or visit radiotimes.com/shop20

A BRIGHT RAY OF DARKNESS ETHAN HAWKE

In another case of art imitating life, Hawke's fourth novel was published in 2021 and is (surprise!) about an actor. As he explained to Entertainment Weekly, "I have found great comfort in the healing powers of performance. I was hoping to share what I have experienced." He's certainly experienced more than when he published his debut novel The Hottest State, aged just 25. A Bright Ray of Darkness reunites readers with The Hottest State's lead character, William Harding, though this time round he has aged ten years and is involved in both a marriage breakdown and a career-defining role in Henry IV.

TRULY LIKE LIGHTNING DAVID DUCHOVNY

Duchovny may have passed the acting baton to his daughter West (she appears in the forthcoming series Saint X on Disney+), but at least it's given him time to become a New York Times bestselling author. Putting his English literature degree from Princeton to good use, the actor delved into the world of America's Mormon communities with this 2021 novel.

THE GUN SELLER HUGH LAURIE

Back in 1996, 20 years before starring in The Night Manager, Laurie penned this send-up of spy novels to rave reviews. Focusing on a slightly hapless ex-soldier, the book benefits from a writing style straight from a British romcom. It proved so popular that there was much hype around Laurie's second novel, The Paper Soldier, due for publication in 2009. Possibly because Laurie was reinventing himself as a blues musician, it remains unwritten to this day, prompting fans to launch a petition.

AN OBJECT OF BEAUTY BY STEVE MARTIN

A comedian, actor and musician, Martin is also a prolific author, who has penned 15 books ranging from a kids' ABC to a collection of essays on life as an art collector. His novella Shopgirl became a film, in which he took one of the lead roles alongside Claire Danes and Jason Schwartzman. While 2010's An Object of Beauty didn't make it to the big screen, it's worth a read thanks to its formidable anti-heroine Lacey Yeager, who will stop at nothing to climb to the top of the New York art scene. You'll either love her or hate her.

BONFIRE KRYSTEN RITTER

Ignore the pulpy cover art: this thriller is so compelling that crime queen Gillian Flynn (who wrote Gone Girl) called it "a phenomenal, haunting debut". Published in 2018, it's Ritter's only book to date, perhaps because her other career involves starring in TV shows such as Netflix's Jessica Jones and HBO's Love and Death. Ritter's lead character is similarly successful – a star lawyer who returns to small-town Indiana to investigate a less-than-respectable business in this tense page-turner.

WHEN IT HAPPENS TO YOU MOLLY RINGWALD

After Ringwald's stint as America's sweetheart in 1980s movies such as The Breakfast Club and Pretty in Pink, she turned her attention to journalism and translation, most recently bringing the French book My Cousin Maria Schneider (about the star of Last Tango in Paris) to English-speaking audiences. Ringwald also published her own novel, When It Happens to You, in 2012. But though it tackled themes of infidelity, gender identity, fame and infertility in one streamlined volume of linked stories, critics were a bit nonplussed:

"It's not so bad that you don't think she might get there someday," explained one in The New York Times...

NO ESCAPE LUCY CLARKE

No Escape Available to stream from Thursday Paramount+
When long-held secrets unravel at home, the fight-or-flight instinct can kick in, and the protagonist of Lucy Clarke's novel chooses the latter, escaping to the Philippines with her best friend. Finding themselves as part of the crew on board The Blue, life seems good. However, author Clarke is known for her thrillers, and No Escape (HarperCollins, £7.99) is no different – as death makes its way to The Blue, the idyllic paradise turns sour as mistrust is sown within the crew. See p37

INTO THE NIGHT: A YEAR WITH THE POLICE MATT LLOYD-ROSE

Book of the Week Mon–Fri 9.45am (FM), 12.30am Radio 4
Volunteer Metropolitan Police officer Matt Lloyd-Rose was a former carer and schoolteacher who joined in order to better understand the community he worked in. Into The Night (Picador, £16.99, published 18 May) reveals the Met that he saw, both good and bad, from the homeless to the hot-dog vendors. He ponders the reframing of the police as a caring, rather than enforcement institution, and how it could better serve its communities.

THE MAN WHO PLAYED WITH FIRE JAN STOCKLASSA

The Man Who Played with Fire Sun 9pm Sky Documentaries
In 1986, Swedish prime minister Olof Palme was assassinated in Stockholm. Up until his death in 2004, The Girl with the Dragon Tattoo author Stieg Larsson had been amassing evidence surrounding this real-life mystery. Some years later, journalist Jan Stocklassa was given access to Larsson's archive, and began piecing together the puzzle himself in The Man Who Played with Fire (Amazon Crossing, £8.99). It's a riveting whodunnit, that lays bare the failings at the heart of the Swedish police's attempts to find Palme's killer. RHIANNON THOMAS

CRAM IN THE COLOUR!

Annuals are the answer if you want flowers for the entire summer, says Joe Swift. Which hues to choose and where they should go is up to you!

WANT GUARANTEED FLOWERS all summer long? Well of course you do! Which makes annuals the way to go. Some are known for being classic “bedding” plants, like petunias, geraniums (they’re pelargoniums actually, but let’s keep this simple), fuschias and lobelia. Then there are other fab annuals such as cosmos, poached egg plants (Limnanthes) and bishop’s flower (Ammi majus).

“Annual” simply means they only last a summer, programmed by nature to flower and set seed in a single season. But if we can trick them into not setting seed (by deadheading or because some are bred not to), they’ll produce more blooms. It’s not mean, it’s called gardening! And this is the time of year to plant them out, as the chance of late frosts has gone.

With annuals there are no rules.

Cram them into pots and containers, window boxes, hanging baskets and gaps in borders to grow them cheek-by-jowl. The colour book goes out the window, too, so you can get inspired by your local pub garden, your favourite team colours or choose a more sophisticated palette (all white, perhaps?). If it doesn’t quite work, just change it up next year.

You may have sown some annuals a few weeks ago indoors, or grown some on from small plugs; if not, buy them in pots or strips from the garden centre. There’s plenty of time for them to really get going this summer.

In containers, use peat-free multipurpose compost. When planting in the ground, add some compost, too, and on particularly poor soils dig a hole and backfill with all new compost (like making a pot in the ground) to plant into. Water and deadhead regularly (pinch out spent flowers with your fingers) and feed every two weeks with liquid seaweed or tomato feed.

Joe Swift is on Gardeners’ World, Friday BBC2

SOME TOP ANNUALS TO PLANT OUT NOW

COSMOS Classy and versatile. Open, daisy-like flowers and ferny foliage in a kaleidoscope of flowers.

CLEOME (spider flower) Great in borders. Statuesque plants with unusual flowers held high on strong stems.

ZINNIA Like mini dahlias, and they thrive in a hot, dry spot. Great as cut flowers, which keeps them producing.

NICOTIANA (tobacco plant) Clusters of tubular, scented flowers in mixed colours as well as whites and greens. Nicotiana sylvestris is tall and elegant and does best in partial shade.

CALENDULA (marigold) Ideal for an injection of bright colour in pots and containers. Fast and fun.

BEGINNER'S GUIDE TO...

Plants for bees

The little buzzers are vital for the pollination of our food and diverse gardens, and are an important resource. In the UK we have around 276 bee species – but have lost 13, with another 35 at risk. Here's how you can help...

■ WHERE TO TRY

Any garden, allotment, border, container or window box can be planted with nectar- and pollen-rich plants. (Nectar is basically sugar and water; pollen an important source of protein.)

enough of it. Does well in a pot and is a very tasty herb, too (win-win!).

Scabious There are the native wild scabious and many garden varieties, too. "Butterfly blue" is a good garden variety as it just keeps flowering all summer long.

■ WHICH ONES?

Choose plants that have open flower shapes – such as daisies (like shasta daisies and asters), umbels (like fennel, angelica and cow parsley) or tubular flowers (foxgloves and campanula). Avoid closed, double flowers that are hard to get into, and highly bred hybrids that are low in nectar. The RHS has a "perfect for pollinators" list at rhs.org.uk/science/conservation-biodiversity/wildlife/plants-for-pollinators

Borage An annual plant flowering from June to September. It must contain something special, as it's always covered in pollinators. Has cucumber-flavoured, edible flowers.

Lavender Another garden favourite for full sun. There are many different varieties and sizes to choose from, and it also makes an excellent low hedge.

Viper's bugloss (Echium vulgare) This biennial has hairy (slug-resistant) foliage and spikes of violet blue flowers.

■ MY TOP FIVE

Oregano A perennial, edible herb growing to about 50–70cm tall – bees can't get

It's irresistible to just about anything that flutters, hovers or buzzes!

Ten Pound Poms
Sunday 9.00pm BBC1

AUSSIES HAVE A slang word for everything, and the name they gave to Britons emigrating via the Australian government's Assisted Passage Migration Scheme after the Second World War was, of course, Ten Pound Poms – due to the administration fee of £10.

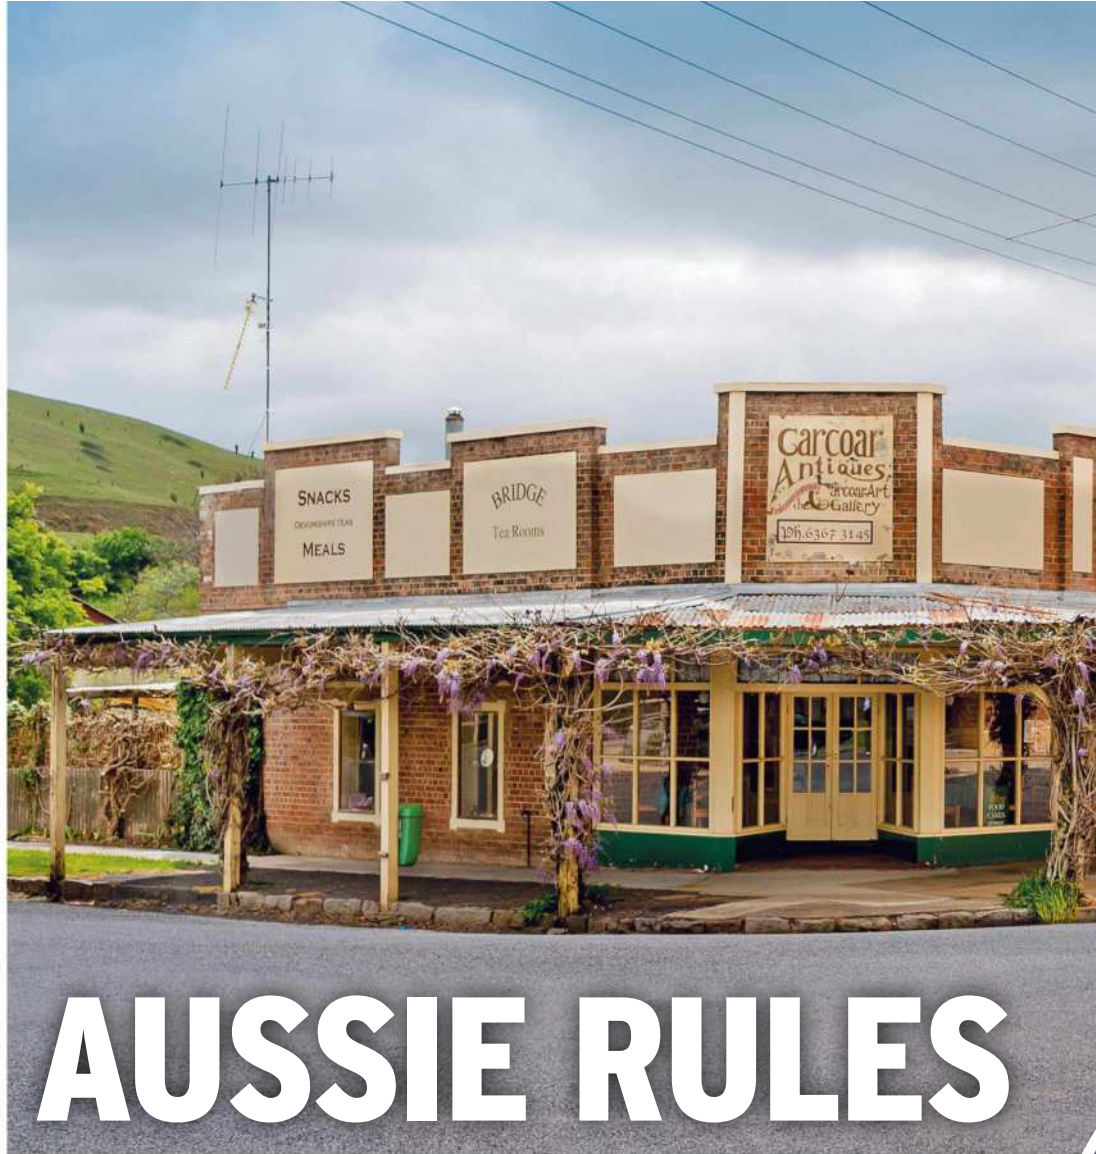

Back then, it took them around six weeks to sail to Australia, usually on retooled merchant vessels, or passenger ships brought out of retirement. In 2025, Qantas will introduce the first non-stop flight to Sydney, taking 24 hours, and there's already a non-stop flight to Perth taking 17. Punishing? Yes. But nothing compared with a month and a half at sea (though they did have plenty of time to get used to the time difference).

Naturally, it has cost me a teensy bit more than £10 to get to New South Wales in 2023, but there's plenty to see, not least the film locations for BBC1's new dramatisation of the Brits' migration starring Michelle Keegan and Warren Brown, as well as the opportunity to get a taste of how the state was settled and experience Sydney from the perspective of a "Blow-in" – slang (again) that Aussies use for newcomers. It's also in Sydney, the state capital and Australia's most populous city, that my Great Aunt Ellen – an original Ten Pound Pom herself – still lives at the age of 99.

'Wagga Wagga is rich in culture, with a thriving food scene'

Sadly, I don't have six weeks to get used to a new time zone, so I have to power through the discombobulation of jet lag to utilise my time to its fullest. I start in Wagga Wagga, a city in the Riverina region of New South Wales. Like many of the other settlements in NSW, it's rich in culture, with a thriving food and coffee scene. But Wagga – as it's known to the locals – has a frontier feel about it, with most of its delights along one main strip and a few offshoots down side roads.

A three-hour drive west takes me to Carcoar, which was transformed into a 1950s town for the TV series. Not that there was much transforming required:

AUSSIE RULES

this place may as well still have a dirt track and a general store. Oh, wait, it does. Once one of the most important government centres in the state, it's now a well-preserved 19th-century township with a wooden bridge over a creek and Victorian shopfronts looming over Main Street.

An hour east, further along the aforementioned dirt track, I find Orange, another Ten Pound Poms location. A retreat for rich Sydney dwellers with a hankering for some proper seasons at altitude, Orange is also a wine-growing region and home to the Charred Kitchen and Bar (charred.com.au). Despite the fact that it looks a bit like your local Harvester from the outside, the food and service are very much that of a Michelin-starred restaurant.

Somewhat groggily I rise before sunrise the following morning and drive towards Canowindra, a farming community whose name derives from the original Aboriginal custodians of the land. It's also known as Australia's hot-air balloon capital and Anton from Balloon Joy Flights (balloonjoyflights.com.au) is waiting to show me the sunrise over the paddocks.

GLIDING AT 2,000FT over a golden landscape (with the occasional burst of flame), there is a Zen-like stillness and I wish I could float all the way to the Blue Mountains. Fortunately, it's almost as pleasant by car, especially when the scent of eucalyptus begins to drift through the air-con; and staying in the classily converted former motel, the Kyah (theykyah.com.au), I imagine myself a little like a prospector, just passing through to see if the land is worth claiming.

The sense of newness, of settlements having sprung up to negotiate this harsh land, extends to Sydney. Australia still feels like a young country and its biggest city is the biography in microcosm. Visible learning curves tell a story of adaptation and survival, from tin-roofed shacks, via Brutalism, to shiny modern edifices – best witnessed by taking a sunrise kayak tour on the harbour (ozpaddle.com.au), where you can see the growth of the metro-polis as if you were counting the rings of a tree trunk.

The transformation continues with the two high-end Ovolo hotels (ovolohotels.com) I stay in: one an old woolstore (the Woolstore 1888) and the Woolloomooloo – a wharf, where Shed No 7 was historically an immigrant passenger terminal. The settlers' pub in the Rocks area of the city has given way to Henry Deane, a swish restaurant-bar (hotel-palisade.com.au) with commanding views of the Harbour Bridge. And of course, there's my Great Auntie Ellen, who arrived here with her husband and built a full and rich life for herself in the harshest of conditions.

Australia is a country built on grit, which is hard-wired into its personality. The story of the Ten Pound Poms covers Australia's tale as an immigrant nation, but now the rest of the story, the Aboriginal one, is being acknowledged, too. Assimilation, history and deference are what make modern-day New South Wales such a special part of the world. visitnsw.com; sydney.com

DO IT YOURSELF

Want to claim tax relief? Don't rely on agents to do it for you, says Paul Lewis

THE TAX AUTHORITIES have stepped in to stop a major abuse of tax refunds by unscrupulous agents. These agents advertised widely, offering to make claims for tax relief (eg marriage allowance or working from home relief) on behalf of taxpayers. The claims are simple for taxpayers to make, but the agents made customers sign an agreement giving the agents the right to receive the money. They then kept a big chunk of it and passed the rest on to the taxpayer... eventually. The agreements were open-ended and meant that any future tax refunds from HMRC would go to the agent not the taxpayer – who could lose, for example, refunds due when HMRC reconciled its PAYE records for tax deducted at work. The strange nature of these “assignments”, as they were called, meant that the taxpayer could not end it without the permission of the agent – which they never gave.

'Agents kept a big chunk of the money'

For some years HMRC claimed it could do nothing to end this abuse. But earlier in 2023 it announced that it had prevented one such agent, called Tax Credits Ltd (TCL), from operating, using laws designed to prevent money-laundering. TCL had more than 11,000 outstanding claims on behalf of individual taxpayers, and HMRC said it would pay those direct to taxpayers. And now it will not allow agents to receive tax refunds on behalf of their clients.

There are still some firms that appear on google searches that offer to claim tax back for individuals, though. You should never use one of them; instead, claim the tax back yourself.

IF YOU'RE MARRIED (or civil partnered) and one of you has an income too low to pay income tax (below £12,570 a year) and the other does not have an income above £50,270 (or above £43,662 in Scotland) then you could claim marriage allowance – worth £252 a year off the taxpayer's bill. If you worked at home in the tax years 2020/21 or 2021/22, even for as little as one day in the year, then you could claim tax relief worth £62.40 for each year (double that if a higher-rate taxpayer). Simply claim by searching gov.uk for “marriage allowance” or “working from home”.

FREE YOURSELF FROM MONTHLY MORTGAGE REPAYMENTS

GET YOUR NEW GUIDE
BY RT'S
PAUL LEWIS

Unlock tax-free cash from your home and free up your monthly expenditure by repaying your existing mortgage

With households facing increased costs but still wanting to enjoy holidays and days out this summer, many are looking for ways to reduce their monthly outgoings. If you're a homeowner aged 55 or over, you could achieve this by releasing some of the equity from your home, tax-free, and repaying your existing mortgage.

COULD EQUITY RELEASE BE RIGHT FOR ME?

Equity release allows you to unlock a percentage of the value of your home without the requirement to make monthly repayments, as the equity released, plus accrued interest, is repaid when you die or move into long-term care.

It has become a popular way to access the wealth tied up in your home to provide greater financial flexibility and stability in retirement, without the need to sell or downsize.

The money released is tax free and can be taken as a lump sum or in smaller instalments. Plus, some plans allow you to pay off a portion of the interest each month, meaning you can reduce the amount of debt that is being rolled up.

SAFEGUARD YOUR INHERITANCE

All equity release plans come with a no negative equity guarantee, which means that you can never pass on the debt to your estate, providing the property is sold for a reasonable amount. There are also plans that allow you to safeguard a percentage of your property value so that you can still pass on an inheritance to your loved ones.

GET EXPERT ADVICE

Radio Times is pleased to be working with Age Partnership+, who are part of the UK's number one equity release adviser*, to offer an equity release service. Through our service, your dedicated adviser can provide you with a personalised illustration so you can understand the features and risks and find out how much you could release.

They will help you understand if equity release could be right for you and they will tell you everything you need to know, including the effect on the amount of inheritance you can leave and if your entitlement to means-tested benefits could be affected now or in the future.

Your adviser will review a wide range of plans from the whole of the market to find the most suitable solution for your individual circumstances.

It's important to know that equity release may involve a home reversion plan or a lifetime mortgage, which is secured against your property. Your quotation is free and you are under no obligation to proceed. Only if you choose to proceed and your case completes would a fee of £1,995 be payable.

Word of the week Grockle

People who live in the West Country will recognise this term for a tourist. There has been much debate as to its origins, but it was certainly popularised by the 1964 film The System, set in Torquay during the summer season. Some speculate it's a nod to the clown Grock, who entertained music-hall audiences in the first half of the 20th century. Perhaps tourists to Devon were viewed as clowns who didn't know the roads and whose noses were red from the sun. Another theory links the word to a cartoon in The Dandy called Danny and the Grockle, in which the grockle was a dragon-like animal.

Cornwall's equivalent, "emmet", is easier to decode. This was originally a dialect word meaning "ant", chosen because tourists swarm like insects all over the county in the summer.

RACE ACROSS BRITAIN...

We're really enjoying Race across the World (BBC1). The scenery is incredible and so diverse. Who knew Canada was so big! We're also amazed by the kindness and generosity of the Canadian people. If the boot was on the other foot, would we Brits be as welcoming and helpful? Sadly, we think the answer is probably no.

CALAMITY DICKENS

I was very disappointed by Great Expectations (BBC1), especially the final episode (30 April). The nonsense of Magwitch's and Compeyson's Wild West-type shootout, led by Miss Havisham as a sort of Calamity Jane, strayed so far from Dickens as to not really merit the title of the series at all.

However, there was some fine acting – notably by Ashley Thomas (Jaggers) and Shalom Brune-Franklin (Estella) – and something of the Gothic atmosphere of the Kent marshes in the first episode that I thought rang true.

“Based on” can work – I enjoyed Armando Iannucci's Personal History of David Copperfield, for example – but sadly, in my view, not this time.

Tom Rees Thames Ditton, Surrey

...Dickens and [series creator] Steven Knight would have got on like a house on fire. This adaptation was sublime, and totally the theatre of drama, blood and incredible plots that Dickens enjoyed. Dickens isn't the cosy national treasure that he has become over years of watered-down adaptations. And before anyone tells me that I'm way off the mark, I have read Dickens all my life and was, back in the 1960s, the first ever juvenile member of the Dickens Fellowship.

RARE SIGHTING
Nowadays David Attenborough is probably more visible than the cuckoo...

LETTER OF THE WEEK

Last call for the cuckoo?

I felt rather sad listening to David Attenborough deliver a recent Tweet of the Day (1 May Radio 4, repeated from 6 May 2013). First we heard the haunting call of the cuckoo. Then Mr Attenborough asked how many of us have actually seen this bird.

I regret to say that it has been a very long time since I even heard the call of the cuckoo in the wild. Perhaps this decline in a once-familiar bird is a sign of what urbanisation is doing to bird life. Nowadays I only ever hear the call of the cuckoo in recordings on radio, television, or artificially imitated in certain works by Beethoven, Haydn, Humperdinck and Saint-Saëns.

it would be like iPlayer but for radio. I hoped I would be able to listen to programmes I had missed. In the beginning I was able to listen to many episodes of The Now Show, The News Quiz or some of the excellent comedy and drama broadcast during the day, not to mention the vast archive of entertainment from the past.

Now when I search for something to listen to, I'm lucky to find a single episode of my favourite quiz or comedy and little or no drama. This is an opportunity to allow people to hear the huge variety of output of BBC radio, but it's going to waste.

Peter Beard Frome, Somerset
RT understands that BBC radio programmes are available on demand for 30 days after they're broadcast. You can find more episodes of The Now Show, The News Quiz and other comedy titles on the Friday Night Comedy podcast, available on BBC Sounds, for more than 30 days. And audio dramas are also available for longer on the Limelight podcast. So it may be a question of looking in different places...

ROYAL DISAPPOINTMENT?

Looking at the listings in the RT coronation issue (6 May), where are the alternative choices between 7.30am and 3pm on Saturday on ...The key to this series is to accept that it isn't a dramatisation, but Alternative Universe fan-fiction, where you can address themes that weren't in the original, tweak the casting and ramp up the sex and drugs and rock 'n' roll. The cast were very strong, although some were burdened with rather flat dialogue.

I gave up after a couple of episodes, but not because it deviated from the original.

NICE SPOT FOR A BREAK

I really enjoyed B&B by the Sea (BBC2, first shown on BBC1 Northern Ireland). It was a lovely blend of getting to know more about the various guest presenters, a taste of the beauty of the area, its proximity to the ocean, and the culinary expertise of resident chef Alex Greene, who seemed to rustle up effortlessly some wonderfully tempting meals from locally sourced produce.

No bad language or ill feeling, either, which was very refreshing. A great watch.

WARNING REQUIRED

I recently lost a son to suicide and was taken by horrified surprise by the scene in Dalgliesh (28 April Channel 5), which was obviously designed to shock and was an apparent suicide. It turned out later not to be, but viewers were not to know that. In any case, the graphic close-up wasn't necessary and there should be a way of warning those personally affected by such things.

Nigel Willis Boston, Lincolnshire
A spokesperson for Channel 5 replies: "We acknowledge some viewers may have found this scene upsetting and, upon review, we will be adding a warning to the episode on My5 and any future repeats. We apologise for any distress this may have caused."

TRUE GRIT

Blue Lights (BBC1) was the best police drama series on the BBC or any other channel for years. It's

WRONG FRAME OF MIND

Can someone please ask BBC2 snooker commentator John Virgo to turn down the volume? I was trained that stress is a conflict of values, attitudes and standards and I definitely find him shouting "WHERE'S THE CUE BALL GOING?" extremely stressful; I wince and cower every time. Shouting is unnecessary and raises the blood pressure.

Adrienne Hill Malvern, Worcestershire

good to see that it will be returning for a second series, but why did Gerry Cliff (Richard Dormer) have to go? All the characters seemed so well developed and deserved back-and-forward stories, but the most charismatic of them all is now a photo on the wall. Perhaps this means that as time goes by, others at the station will show the same grit, determination and character as Gerry. I look forward to series two.

FRONTLINE STORIES

Once again BBC foreign correspondent Lyse Doucet is reporting from the middle of a war zone, this time Sudan. Time and time again these incredibly brave reporters risk their lives to bring us news from areas of appalling danger. Is it too much to hope that they are paid more than people sitting in studios commenting on football matches?

THE TRAIN MAN

I have just watched The Trains That Time Forgot (27 April BBC4, first shown in 2015) and loved it, loved it, loved it! Presenter Andrew Martin was a revelation (at least to me). Where's he been?

Elaine Faulkner Bingley, West Yorkshire
Andrew Martin tells RT: "I am principally a writer of books – fiction and non-fiction. My book about the Paris Metro, called Metropolitain, is out in August, and my memoir, Yorkshire – There and Back, is out in paperback in July. I also wrote a series of essays about cycling that were broadcast a few weeks ago on Radio 3 and are available at bbc.co.uk/programmes/m001k8d9. My website is <https://jimstringernovels.com>"

FLOGGING AN IDEA

Doesn't Flog It! just epitomise the BBC? Axed in 2020 as part of a shake-up to "modernise" the daytime schedule (in other words, it only appealed to older viewers who no longer matter), it's now being repeated seven afternoons a week. Not only that, these repeats are being repeated again a mere few weeks after their last repeat!

RT ARCHIVE

Douze points! RT votes for Eurovision

As Liverpool hosts the Eurovision Song Contest for Ukraine on Saturday (BBC1, Radio 2), we headed deep into the archive to find five memorable occasions when the show made the RT cover. To see the full gallery of Europop covers, go to: radiotimes.com/eurovision-covers

Kathy Kirby RT 20–26 March 1965

In the 1960s, the UK's Eurovision entry was a big star, with two BBC TV series and two top ten singles. More than half a million people sent in postcards with their votes for our Song for Europe that year, with 110,000 of them choosing I Belong. Kirby came second, beaten by Luxembourg.

Angela Rippon RT 2–8 April 1977

Having won in 1976 with Save Your Kisses for Me sung by Brotherhood of Man, it was the UK's turn to host. There was only one choice for the presenter – Angela Rippon. Having high-kicked her way into Morecambe and Wise history the previous Christmas, it was a chance to show off her linguistic skills.

< to praise Thomas Firmin, who in 1655 founded the metalworking business that makes the ceremonial buttons, badges and insignia for the military uniforms. He was a lifelong philanthropist, and a close friend of John Locke the philosopher, as well as thinkers, churchmen and politicians.

Firmin's first thought was always for the welfare of his workers, often paying their wages

Netherlands RT 19–25 April 1980

Radio Times has a proud record of using illustrations both inside and on the cover of the magazine, and this one was particularly striking. As the contest was being held in the Netherlands, Mick Brownfield's illustration was of – what else – a bunch of singing tulips!

Terry Wogan and Boyzone

RT 3–9 May 1997
Wogan's witty Eurovision commentary for Radio 2 in the 70s earned him the job on TV from 1980 to 2008, and he became more a reason for watching than any of the songs. In 1997, with Dublin the venue and Boyzone lead singer Ronan Keating the host, he was on our cover with the band, who were the interval act – but that year Ireland came second to the UK's Katrina and the Waves.

Abba RT retrospective,

15–21 May 2004

Thirty years after the Swedish quartet's career-defining win at Brighton, RT paid tribute to Abba. We also looked back at the scoring on that night in 1974, and the somewhat bizarre way the UK jury voted – awarding Waterloo "nul points"! DAVID HODGES

RICHARD ARMITAGE

The former Spooks star on hobbits, sex scenes and not watching TV

What's the view from your sofa?

I can't tell you that because otherwise you'd be able to figure out exactly where I live... I actually don't have a sofa. I sit in an Eames chair that has a 360-degree view of London. It's where I write, think and learn lines. There's a TV somewhere, but it doesn't get switched on very often.

When it is, what do you watch?

Most recently, Bad Sisters – I have friends and acquaintances in it and I'm a massive Sharon Horgan fan. In terms of guilty pleasure, I'm very fond of a baking show, a bit of interior design and Dragons' Den. I like programmes where people do creative things in a celebratory way.

Do you feel obliged to watch shows that your pals are in?

Yes – if you don't want to lie and pretend that you have and smile and say, "I loved that bit with the dog!" And then they're like, "There is no dog!" We all try to support each other's work.

Any telly turn-offs?

After two and a half years of Middle-Earth, I'm not drawn to fantasy any more...

Being in The Hobbit film series must have been a game-changer. How do you choose what jobs to turn down?

I love that you said "choose" because there is a misconception that actors are able to pick and choose what they want to do. I would say 98% of the work that I'm offered, I say yes to!

How different was it working on a major film production compared with your early BBC jobs on North and South and Spooks?

It's quite intimidating when you go into a massive machine like that [especially] when it has such a legacy. It was terrifying. For a long time, I struggled with who I was in that world. You're sitting down for dinner with Peter

Jackson and the head of Warner Bros, thinking, "I don't belong here." I just got my head down and got on with the job as best as I could. Somebody recently said, "It must have felt like the world was your oyster." It never actually did. The oyster is always slowly closing because for every actor on the ascent, you're always going to have to descend.

We think you can relax – everyone is talking about your current role in Netflix's Obsession. You play a man, William, who has an affair with his son's fiancée, Anna. Are sex scenes easier with an intimacy coordinator? Intimacy co-ordination comes at the very early, technical stage when breaking down a script. We went back to the source material, Josephine Hart's novel Damage, which was quite controversial in the late 80s and was extremely graphic. It had to be dealt with so that both actors were comfortable, and we could inhabit the characters fully without inhibition.

The way the intimacy coordinator helped us to do that was to suggest that we always referred to ourselves

MY LIFE IN TV

SNACK AND DRINK OF CHOICE

FIRST TV MEMORY

Crossroads – I used to watch with my mum. I saw Nolly recently and thought "This is my childhood!"

as William and Anna – "These are William's hands" or "This is Anna's body". The navigation would be, "Can William touch Anna's breasts? Her back?" It relinquished responsibility.

What happens if you dislike your co-star? Presumably that would be bad for on-screen chemistry – and a disaster in an erotic thriller?

Two people who dislike each other can create chemistry. It's odd – I've never had that because I generally like people and I see the best in them! Charlie [Murphy] and I got on really well. We were very open with each other, and figured out what we were comfortable with.

I remember saying to her, "Look, this is such a crucial part of the spine of the story. I don't want to do these intimacy scenes, wishing them away and thinking, 'Thank God that's over,' because then you're going to wish the job away." I wanted to embrace it and make the most of it and she agreed. We approached it like two dancers, two pieces of marble being sculpted. KELLY-ANNE TAYLOR
